Many cities and boroughs began their municipal year last Monday. Philadelphia swore in its new and reformed mayor J. Hampton Moore on that day. The election of Moore was a blow to contractor rule in the big metropolis but long before the term closes the contractors usually get their fingers on mayor and get in their work. Mayor Hyman, of New York, was down to see the Reformer sworn in to service.

Harrisburg swore into service George Hoover for its mayor and Reading issued papers to John J. Stauffer, Mayor-elect Harry L. Trout, of Lancaster died before the oath could be administered to him. LABOR AND THE CAMPAIGN

It is stated that labor, both union and nonunion will take an active part in this year's campaign. The Gazette believes it should. It has large stake in the game.

So has capital. So should it take an active part in the campaign. It should too out for its own interests. Lie wise the public should bestir itself in campaign matters this year. No campaign in many years has signified so much to the public.

Many more than one issue will be presented next November. There will be the tariff issue, with its appeal to all interests. Capital wants a continuation of such protection as may be necessary to the earning of dividends. Labor wants such an arrangement of schedules and rates as will insure good wages and the maintenance of the American standards of living.

There will be the railroad issue and the merchant marine issue is of interest to all. These and other issues will be passed upon by the two leading parties this year and the candidates for the presidency and for Congress will be pledged accordingly.

A BIG STORM

The week before Christmas a storm hit Osterburg. The Reformed minister there is keeping himself warm by shoveling himself out of feathers and bristles which came in deep drifts. The Moorehead family of King, 25 in number surprised the minister and his wife with a donation of many good things to eat and to have. They are gradually recovering from the shock and do certainly appreciate this kind of a visit from Santa Claus.

SHIPPING BOARD TO SELL ALL VESSELS.

Bids for the sale of 29 former German and one former Austrian passenger ships were asked by the Shipping Board. The board's decision was reached after reports of experts who pointed out that it would cost $50,000,000 to recondition them. The one prominent stipulation called for in the sale is that the boats will be run under the American flag, for it is the Shipping Board's intention to foster and develop an American merchant marine and trade routes to various parts of the world.

READY TO BRING HERO DEAD HOME

A detachment of 50 civilian employees have left the War Department bound for France where they will supervise the disinterment of American dead in Europe for shipment to the United States. Their work in France will extend that which has been going on for several months and will make good the promise of the Government to return the dead heroes to their relatives here for burial at their homes.

COMPROMISE ON TREATY REMOTE

After many conferences between Senator Lodge and Republican and Democratic Senators who favor ratification of the peace treaty, both sides announced that they were further from an agreement than at any time since the question for an agreement was begun. Both sides seem to be waiting the action of the other and neither willing to suggest a common meeting ground.

BABY BONDS FOR 1920.

During 1920 the Government will continue its "thrift" campaign. That is, it will offer a new issue of thrift and war savings stamps, both as a means of raising revenue and as an encouragement to popular thrift. The new issue will be in the form of small funds. Bedford County people have acquired a habit that is invaluable and is certain to make for their prosperity. The total of these securities bought by the people of the United States during the past two years has been $1,128,000,000. Practically half of this represents money that would not otherwise have been saved. A very large part consists of the pennies and dimes of children. Youngsters who never had savings accounts before have certificates stored away in safe places, for redemption a few years hence.

There is no reason why this should not become a permanent feature of the Treasury's operations. Certainly for a long time the war debt of the Government will require unusual measures for funding, and the short-term loans of the people will be an efficient aid in turning over the account for gradual reduction.

The 1920 issue of "baby Bonds" will have a slight advantage over the others in that they will be redeemable at the U. S. Treasury at Washington on demand, although the ten-day notice requirement will continue as to post office redemptions and at other offices. It is hard to see why this distinction is made. Redemptions are not likely to be demanded at the post offices in such sudden volume as to cause embarrassment without notice.

WILL ASK NEW LAW ON WOOD ALCOHOL

Legislation subjecting the manufacture and sale of wood alcohol to the same restrictions as grain alcohol will be recommended to Congress as a result of the many fatalities from the use of wood alcohol as a beverage. Commissioner Roper of the Internal Revenue Bureau stated. The form of the proposed legislation has not been decided upon, but it is understood that officials have in mind the placing of a heavy tax on its manufacture and sale.

REPUBLICAN SENATORS WORRIED OVER TREATY

Knox, Changing Front, Willing Now to Ratify Pact—Lodge Uncomfortable

Washington, D. C.—Predictions that the Senate's failure to ratify the treaty would disturb and depress business in this country and retard "reconstruction" in Europe are being fulfilled in a way that is alarming Republican Senators. The steady depreciation of foreign exchange with its threat of curtailing the exportation of American products which Europe needs and which the exporters of this country must sell, if production is to continue, is but one effect of the treaty's defeat by the Senate.

Among the signs of fear among Republican Senators who had the principal part in the smothering of the treaty is Senator Knox's proposal to ratify it now in all details, but after separating it from the covenant of the League of Nations. On its face this would not appear to be an evidence of weakness or surrender on the part of Senator Knox, but those who have followed his course while the treaty was before the Senate regard it as a concession born of conviction that further delay in ratifying the treaty will bring calamity to American business and a day of reckoning for the Republican camp in the Senate.

Senator Knox opposed not only the League of Nations but also the treaty itself. In a formal speech, carefully prepared in advance of its delivery, Mr. Knox declared the provisions of the treaty to be "harsh and cruel" to the German people. Previously he had sought the passage of a resolution to dissociate the treaty from the covenant of the League of Nations.

In addition to his change of view with regard to the treaty—which he is now willing to accept in all his prescriptions—Senator Knox has moved far enough from his former position to suggest that the United States become a "consulting member" of the League of Nations. Democratic commentators do not regard this as a big concession, of course, but they appreciate its importance when read in connection with the Senator's previous hostility to both the treaty and the League.

No one expected Mr. Knox to reverse himself over night, or at all. He hasn't yet "about faced" but he has certainly executed a "right face"—with his eyes in the direction of a full turn. Senator Lodge continues to employ the language of opposition but his manner is that of who has concession in the back of his mind, in the opinion of those who have watched his recent maneuvers. In one of the latest discussions of the treaty in the Senate Mr. Lodge affected to treat the connection between the rejection of the treaty and the decline of foreign exchange, but it was apparent that he realized the result to himself and others of a popular belief that there is a relation between the two.

Other Republican Senators appear to be disconcerted by the ruinous fall in the value of foreign money and foresee its effect on American business. It is believed that they are aware that if the Senate's refusal to ratify the treaty is not the sole cause, it is a principal factor in the present demoralizing discount of sovereigns, francs, lire and marks. They seem to understand that a further depreciation of Europe's money will prevent buying here and that American production will slacken and begot unemployment and financial depression in the United States.

It would be too much to say that the Republicans are showing signs of full retreat from their former position, but it is within the truth to say that they are planning for a "strategic retirement."

NO INFLUENZA IN 1919

In looking back over the year just closed, there is one fact which stands out most conspicuously as a reason for great gratitude. The country has been spared a return of the epidemic that a year ago was just ending after a terrible scourging of all sections. When the influenza outbreak waned last winter there were many who felt sure of its return this season. With the exception of a very few cases, however, there have been no signs of renewal. These few cases have been so promptly treated that the disease has not spread from them, and for weeks no sign of the disease has appeared.

There was no adequate explanation of his peculiar wave of disease sweeping westward from the battle worn fields of Europe across the Atlantic and throughout America. It was doubtless a war disease, generated by the conflict, but how, and just why it came in 1918 rather than in one of the earlier years of the war is one of the mysteries yet unsolved. To us it seemed to spread westward, though, in fact, it went in all directions. It was without exception the most fatal epidemic disease that ever visited Bedford County and the country prays that never again will it have such an experience as that which made 1918 one of the most agonizing times in its history.

1,500 MORE ALIENS TO GO SOON.

Further deportations of dangerous aliens involving about 1,500 will be made by the bureau of immigration through the Ellis Island depot within the next three months. It was learned from authoritative sources. These deportations, following closely on the heels of 249 aliens who very nearly clean up the United States of practically all known anarchistic leaders.

DANIEL P. COSTELLO

Daniel P. Costello was born in Scranton, Pa., on November 8, 1878. He died in the hospital at Pittsburgh on January 2nd 1920. His body was brought to Mann's Choice at which place funeral services were held in the Reformed church, of which he was a member, on Tuesday afternoon January 6th, conducted by Rev. J. Albert Eyer of Bedford. Interment in Kinton's cemetery. He was a young man of sterling qualities, who had a host of friends and who leaves to mourn his loss his widow, who before her marriage was Miss Orpha Waters of Mann's Choice, a little boy three years old and a little girl eight months old. He is survived also by four brothers and three sisters. The high esteem in which he was held by those who knew him best was attested by the many floral tributes which accompanied the body from Pittsburgh.

TEMPERANCE FORCES WILL CELEBRATE THE COMING OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION JANUARY 5th

On next Thursday evening January 15, from 9 until 12 o'clock Watch making services will be held in the Presbyterian church by the Temperance forces of Bedford in celebration of National Prohibition becoming operative on January 16th.

An excellent program has been prepared by the W. C. T. U. for this occasion which promises to be full of interest from start to finish.

Men of prominence will speak on various phases of the great social problem so vital to our Nation and a feast of good things in form of shining music, Prohibition Pageant, Temperance Camp-fire etc., will fill the hour with the justest.

At midnight the bells of the town will be rung ushering in the New Era of Constitutional Prohibition which is the grand consummation of Years of untiring effort on the part of the moral forces of our Nation.

This is a time when all can rejoice together, and a hearty invitation is extended to all persons to unite in making the evening of January 15th a Red Letter Event in Bedford's history.

Be on time—9 P. M.—Presbyterian Church.

PENALTIES ARE HEAVY

Three or four persons in Fulton County have been picked up by Game Warden, Eli Ritchey, the other day for pursuing deer after the law was out. The penalty is $100 and each had to pay, so the report goes. It seems that Harve Welsh and three others started out on New Years day to hunt. They came upon the track of a doe and a fawn. They followed them for some miles when Mr. Ritchey came upon them. They all ran when they saw the warden, but he knew the parties and they are reported to have paid their fine.

A fawn came down from the ridge near Mann's Choice the other day pursued by a dog. In attempting to cross the ice on the stream where some boys were skating the fawn fell and broke its leg. The boys beat the dog off carried the fawn off the ice and got a man to haul it to Jacob Slesk's barn near by. Mr. Ritchey was notified and they bandaged the leg but it died. The dogs have not been found, and their owners are not known. Some time ago a Johnstown paper stated that four or five Hyndman hunters had to pay a fine of $100 each for killing a doe.

George B. Hemming reported a doe having been seen out his way and a big buck and doe have been seen out by Smith's Crossing and Yount. Deer seem to be getting plentiful and if the sportsmen will make an effort to keep dogs from running them these mountains will be inhabited by deer again. Turkeys are reported plentiful as well as rabbits.

RHODE ISLAND ADAPTED WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT

The woman's suffrage amendment was passed by a three fourths vote by the lower house of the Rhode Island legislature and the Senate passed the Amendment with only one dissenting vote. Woman's Suffrage will be a reality in 1920 along with National Prohibition.

RED CROSS SEAL SALE REPORT

The Red Cross seal sale was a big success in Pennsylvania. With the money secured and the health lessons given, we are confident a real start has been made in the program planned to overcome the scourge of tuberculosis that took 12,835 lives in this state in 1918. The Counties wish to thank all persons who took any part in this sale, especially the teachers and scholars of the public schools. The following is the report of committee on sale of seals in Bedford.

Amount of sale of Red Cross Seals $167.31
Sale of four Health Bonds $20.00
Total $187.31
The Red Cross Seal Society of Bedford received 20 per cent of proceeds which amounted to $149.98 Signed Secretary.

The McVey Co. Open Bedford Office

The McVey Co., Real Estate Operators with offices in Altoona, Johnstown, Mt. Union and Bellefonte have opened a branch office in the Kide hour Block and with specialization in the sale of farm sites and ready cut houses. F. E. Naus of 402 East Penn. St. will be manager of the Bedford office.

FIRE IN MARTINSBURG SCHOOL HOUSE

The Martinsburg school opened Jan 3 after being closed about two weeks. The weather being very cold the janitor kept an unusual fire going on in the furnace. Shortly after the noon hour flames were seen bursting through the roof. The fire drill called and the scholars were safely taken out of the burning building.

There were only graded rooms in the building, the High School being moved to the Seminary at the starting of the term, so as to give them more room for the younger scholars. The school boys soon had the fire engine and hose on the scene and the fire was extinguished without much damage being done. These boys deserve much praise and credit for their heroic work. Professor Dean and the staff of teachers soon had the children pacified and the school in order.

Talk of a new school house being built in the near future is current, as the school building has been too small for some time.

Among the scholars in the burning School House were: Stephen and Josephine Smith, eldest son and youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Smith, who recently moved from Cessna, near Bedford, to Martinsburg.

MRS. MARY HARDMAN

Mrs. Mary Hardman died at her home seven miles north of Cumberland on Friday, January 2nd at 12 P. M. aged 76 years, and 7 months. Her death was caused by creeping paralysis.

At an early age she was united in marriage to Levi Hardman who died about 6 years ago. Deceased is survived by the following children: Shaanon of Bedford; Clint at home; Fred of New York; Miss Carrie, of Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. William Dishop of Bedford; Mrs. Elsworth Brothemack, of Cumberland Md.; Mrs. Charles Crowden of Cumberland Valley, and Mrs. Samuel Eganer of Cumberland Valley.

The funeral was held Sunday Jan. 4th at 2:30 P. M. in Bethel M. E. church, Rev. B. J. Bryon officiating. Interment was made in the cemetery at Bethel. The large crowd which gathered to pay last tribute of respect was an evidence of the esteem in which she was held.

RECEPTION DINNER

On New Year's evening at seven o'clock P. M. a sumptuous dinner was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shoemaker of Buffalo Mills, in honor of Humphrey, C. and Laura E. Wolford Deibert, who were married on Christmas eve.

After the dinner was served the entire evening was spent in rendering vocal and instrumental selections, Mr. Deibert being a skilled musician. Mr. and Mrs. Deibert accompanied by Miss Combs of East Liverpool, Ohio, sang several duets. Mrs. Deibert and Miss Combs also sang a duet. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Deibert, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shoemaker, Misses Emma and Laura Shoemaker, Miss Ethel Combs, of East Liverpool Ohio and F. E. Shoemaker of Lutzville, Pa. All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Deibert prosperity in their wedded life.

HARRISON PLEACHER

Harrison Pleacher, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Pleacher, died on Monday, January 5th at his home in Mann's Choice of kidney trouble.

Deceased was aged 13 years. He is survived by his father and mother, 3 brothers, Henry of Bedford; William J. Charles and one sister Jennie, all at home.

The funeral services were conducted on Wednesday by Rev. Pittenger of Wolfsburg. Interment was made at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

THE FOURTEENTH CENSUS

For the fourteenth time in the United States, the Government is now counting the people. In Bedford County it is going on systematically for months in advance preparations were made for the enumeration. The primary purpose of the census is to ascertain the population in order to determine the size of the House of Representatives and the constitutional provision that "representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included within this Union according to their respective numbers."

The first census of the United States disclosed a national population of 3,929,214 and in 1910 the enumeration disclosed 91,962,266 people in continental United States. Subsequent estimates based on carefully devised formulas have brought the total up to 105,253,300 in 1918. It is believed that the fourteenth census will show a continental population close upon 110,000,000.

Between national counts cities, with an eye to their needs and ambitions, conduct their own enumerations and there is as a rule dissatisfaction with the Federal census returns, which are normally below the local counts.

GOV'T. NOT TO BUY CUBAN SUGAR

President Wilson has decided not to exercise the authority granted him to purchase and distribute the sugar crop of Cuba as was provided for in the sugar control bill. Acting upon the advice of the sugar equalization board, he will confine their efforts to price control and assisting American refiners in getting the crop.

NEW OFFICIALS ASSUME DUTIES

The new Bedford County officers took their seats on Monday. Irvin M. Ebersole, of South Woodbury, assumed the office of Treasurer vacated by Charles L. Longenecker. Mr. Longenecker vacates the office with a host of friends. He will deal in stock and will remain in Bedford for a while at least. Mr. Ebersole's son will be his clerk. The office of Sheriff was taken by J. M. Fink, of Saxton. Mr. Andrew Dodson of Hopewell vacating. Mr. Dodson will move to Hopewell, his former home where he will operate coal mines. Andrew Dodson made one of the best sheriffs Bedford County ever had. He is a big hearted man. The office of prothonotary was assumed by Lieut. Henry J. Pleacher, who succeeds Charles R. Mock. Mr. Mock will assume the practice of law, on the second floor of the Hartley Bank building where he will attend to the duties of his profession as assiduously as he served the people in the capacity of Prothonotary and Clerk of Courts. In that office he had no superiors. Mr. Pleacher's deputy will be Mr. James Russell who has served in that capacity for several years. W. B. Mock has been returned to the position of Register and Recorder by the voters. In the office of County Commissioner T. C. Bradley, Albert Layton and Ross A. Stiver took their respective places. The organization of the board resulted in T. C. Bradley being elected president. They board then proceeded to elect a clerk, an attorney and a janitor for the Court House. George R. Shuck was elected clerk and D. C. Reiley was elected attorney to the board and Samuel Delancy was elected janitor for the Court House at a salary of only $50 per month—a shame. The commissioners then proceeded to lay a millage for County Tax. Last year they had 7 mills. This year they have raised it 2 and made it 9. This was the pre-election prediction of the Gazette. In fact it was no prediction. We knew it for a certainty if Bradley and Layton were elected and the people chose it so. Just what they expect to do with the extra two mills tax is problematical when 7 mills more than pays the expenses of the county. It is a case of bugging county affairs if the county can't subsist on 7 mills when we have from time to time $50,000 to $60,000 in the treasury. Ross A. Stiver made a little speech before the board in which he added that he would like to see everything in the county run smoothly and harmoniously and that he hoped that little petty politics would not enter into the transactions that the board ought to look to the very best interests of the taxpayers of Bedford County.

The new auditors assumed their duties on Monday in the names of Ralph Hoover, W. Scott Snyder and F. O. Reighard. They elected as their clerk, William Beam. W. Scott Snyder was elected president; Ralph Hoover, Vice President and F. O. Reighard, secretary. The Poor Directors do not change. George A. Hillgass, S. S. Bass, being re-elected. We suggest it the County Auditors that they audit the accounts in detail of the Alms House. This has never been done. The auditors have merely been content to look over the treasurers' account and let that suffice. Why not audit that account in detail the same as the account of the County Commissioners. Both are boards elected by the people and the people have just as much right to know in detail where the money goes to the care of the poor as for any other reason. Let's see if the poor gets the bulk of it. Get down to an audit there. It's up to the auditors to audit not to fiddle.

BIG REAL ESTATE TRANSFER

Last Saturday another big real estate deal was consummated. C. W. Moorehead proprietor of one of Bedford's meat markets bought the Tate building opposite Gazette building for $12,000. This building is 60 feet front and 210 back and has a dwelling apartment on the second and third stories as well as the large and spacious rooms occupied by the Plez-U Shop and the Sanitary Bakery. Above the bakery and the Plez-U Shop are large rooms suitable for living or office rooms. Mr. Moorehead will fix up the building with a modern heating plant. The Plez-U Shop will be moved on the corner after the floor is lowered to the pavement and the meat market will occupy the room now held by the Plez-U.

NO SEAT FOR BERGER. PERHAPS NO MILEAGE

Victor Berger, socialist, Congressman-elect from Wisconsin, not only will be denied a seat in the House of Representatives but will be prevented from drawing mileage or any of the several allowances provided for a member. This time, the House will make quick work excluding Berger when he appears with his second certificate of election. This is the plan of leaders who are determined that Berger shall not be allowed to draw pay and allowances while his case drags along as was done with his first certificate. On the previous occasion by the time the House voted to exclude him, Berger had drawn more than $5,000.

One of the antidotes prescribed by one of the doctors for wood alcohol poisoning was to drink good whiskey. If they could have got the remedy, few people would have had the disease.

CLEAN UP TIME

Now is the time to get rid of that old brush pile in the orchard, and clean up the brush from the fence rows. Not only does a clean, tidy field or orchard increase one's pride in his land, but it is well worth doing as a protection to trees and crops. Brush piles and frowzy fence rows are not only ideal shelters for rabbits and mice, which are dangerous inhabitants in any orchard, but they are also hibernating quarters for many plant diseases and insect enemies. A little time spent now with an axe and a few matches will add much to the appearance of the farm and pay big returns in lessening losses from various pests.

The funeral services were held in the Reformed church, Everett, on Monday, January 10th conducted by Rev. J. Albert Eyer of Bedford assisted by the Rev. Mr. Biddle of the Presbyterian church, Everett, representing the Everett Ministerium. The interment was made in the beautiful cemetery crowning the hill east of Everett.

At the United Brethren parsonage New Paris, on Dec. 31, 1200, the Rev. John Winwood united in marriage Mr. Harry H. Davis son of H. Winter Davis of New Paris and Miss Marie Aida Miller daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Miller of Schellsburg, Pa. Mr. Davis was in service over sea during the World War and acted as a "Runner" or "Messenger Boy" during the battle of Chateau Thierry. Miss Miller was a teacher in the public schools of Napier township, and at the time of her marriage was teaching in Somerset county near Quemahoning. The young couple are now located at Northside, Pittsburgh.

A FELICITOUS BEST MEND

The report that James M. Beck is to be Under Secretary of State in the Harding Administration ought to be received with manifestations of unmeasured delight by those 6,000,000 German-American voters whom George Sylvester Viereck marched to the ballot-box. It would be a direct answer to Mr. Viereck's appeal for German-American representation in the Harding Cabinet. Mr. Beck is of German descent, and while a slight unpleasantness may have arisen between him and other Americans of German descent, he is surpassed by none of them in his hatred of Woodrow Wilson. That record alone should be sufficient to blot out "The Evidence in the Case."

The appointment of Mr. Beck would also be a delicate concession to the anti-Wilson Democrats, for Mr. Beck used to be a Democrat himself, and thirty years ago was one of the most eloquent Democratic spell-binders who ever vexed the smoke-ridden atmosphere of Pennsylvania. Being a Pennsylvania Democrat was always a thankless job, however, and nobody has ever proven in a more profitable manner the superior advantages of being a New York Republican.

Organized labor, which voted in large numbers to return to normalcy, ought to be equally well satisfied. Mr. Beck helped to invent normalcy. There is no more ardent champion of the open shop, with all that implies, than he, and if he can have his way labor will be restored to a condition of primitive independence in which the workman may be privileged to toil as many hours a day as he likes for a wage that will not in itself increase the cost of living to anybody.

There may be a few bilious people who do not regard James M. Beck as their kind of a best mend, but we should have picked him among a million to be one of Warren G. Harding's kind.

TO ALL INTERESTED IN SPORTSMANSHIP—SENDING IN REPORTS OF GAME KILLED DURING 1920 SEASON

Many sportsmen throughout the State are under the impression it is not urgent that each man who secures a hunter's license for 1920 see to it that the stub attached to the end of the license is sent to the Game Commission at Harrisburg at the close of the season, or as soon thereafter as possible. This is an entirely erroneous impression. The Game Commission earnestly requests that all these stubs be sent in immediately whether any game was killed or not, and any sportsman who has up to this time neglected to send in his report should see to it that this is done at once.

The work of tabulating the data from the individual reports received is now under way but unless hunters who have not yet sent in their report get busy it will delay this tabulating considerably. The data already collected is producing information that will be invaluable to every resident of the State.

Do you want your country to fall down in this matter? If not get busy send in your report and see to it that your fellow-sportsman do the same.

Seth E. Gordon.
Secretary, Game Commission.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM IN DANGER

During the Presidential campaign Gov. Cox repeatedly gave warning of a purpose among Senator Harding's political backers to undermine the Federal Reserve Act. Senator Curtis, Republican whip of the Senate, fresh from a conference with Senator Harding, now confirms Gov. Cox's charges.

The scheme, openly fathered by Senator Curtis, as he describes it, "Will olok to establishing a original Republican programme of a single central bank with branches." This is nothing less than the Aldrich plan of a single central bank which plan rejected at the time of the adoption of the Federal Reserve System. It is the kind of central bank under the control of large private financial interests that Republican stand-patters in the Senate advocated and sought to establish. Because they were wedded to the idea of a central bank, they voted, with few exceptions, against the Federal Reserve Act. Evidently their homes had been revived by the events of Nov. 2, 1920.

There is nothing in the Republican platform to justify this programme of destruction. At Chicago the Republican Party cautiously declared, "The Federal Reserve System should be free from political influence, which is quite as important as its independence of domination by financial combinations." But the Old Guard in the Senate is again assured control after March 4, with a Republican House and Republican President. The leaders of the Senate are men who favored the Aldrich plan and voted against the Federal Reserve Act. They do not feel the need of direct authority under the Chicago platform to return to "the original Republican programme of a single central bank."

It is a dangerous move, for it threatens the very foundation of the Federal Reserve System, which has saved the people of the United States from financial disaster.

1,250,000 TOO FEW HOUSES IN THE U. S.

Shortage Affects 4,000,000 Persons, Says Report to the Chamber of Commerce.

Washington, Jan. 5.—There is a shortage of 1,250,000 houses in the United States, and more than 4,000,000 persons are inadequately housed. According to an estimate to be submitted to the National Council of the United States Chamber of Commerce by John Ihlder, manager of the Civic Development Department, at a meeting on Jan. 27 and 28, called to discuss relief measures.

"Before the World War," said Mr. Ihlder to-day, "it is estimated that there were erected between 350,000 and 400,000 family dwellings each year. During the war construction was practically at a standstill. In 1919 there were built only about 70,000 houses, while the number erected during 1920 will probably turn out to have been even smaller. There are practically no houses for rent in most communities. The wage earner and those earning small salaries are hit hardest by the housing shortage. It is for these people that decent houses must be built. "Meanwhile, they, as well as many with larger incomes, are doubling up or taking in lodgers. This overcrowding of rooms is viewed with anxiety by the public health officials who realize how infectious diseases spread under such conditions."

WOULD STOP LOBBYISTS

Senator Kenyon Advocates Law To Clear Corridors

Washington, Jan. 11.—A law requiring lobbyists in Washington to register, telling who they are and what they represent, was advocated today in the senate by Senator Kenyon, Republican, Iowa.

"Washington is crowded with lobbyists," senator Kenyon declared. "You cannot get from your office to the Senate unless someone stops you to talk a bill. The oil, lumber and other big interests, are lobbying."

BETTER BRIDGES ELIMINATING 41 KILLED AND 75 WOUNDED DURING HUNTING SEASON

Figures for Pennsylvania Show That Game was Pleatiful In 1920
Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 6.—Estimates that 33,000 deer were killed in Pennsylvania's game season were made to the state game commission at its January meeting by Seth Gordon, the secretary, the data being obtained from reports of officers. This is greater than last season. Sixty-six illegal male deer and 198 does were reported killed. The rabbit killed is estimated at 3,600,000 while various other kills are estimated at follows: Bear, 412; squirrels, 700,000; raccoons, 31,000; wild turkey, 3,000; brush grouse, 425,000; pheasants, 24,000; quail, 48,000; woodcock, 33,000; wild duck, 25,000; shorebirds, 15,365. During the hunting season reports show forty-one persons killed and seventy-five wounded.

The congress and show will be held under the auspices of the American Road Builders' Association, which includes in its membership, the highway officials of the national government and those of the states, counties, cities and townships in the United States and Canada, together with highway engineers, users of roads, contractors and manufacturers of road building machinery, road materials and highway transportation equipment.

It is estimated that there are about 400,000 bridges of more than five-foot span in the United States. According to Willis Whited, bridge engineer of the Pennsylvania State Highway Department, it is probable that more than 80 per cent of these are unable to carry a thoroughly modern truck with an ample margin of safety. A majority of the bridges consist of a single span of wooden stringers with plank floors. Better construction and inspection of these bridges is one of the advances which members of the American Road Builders' Association are advocating and it is likely that a vigorous campaign will be inaugurated at the Chicago good roads meeting with those ends in view. Engineers, like Mr. Whited, believe that the smaller bridges of the country will, for the most part, have to be rebuilt and the floors of the larger ones will have to be strengthened. Truck traffic, they say, is growing constantly heavier, and the limit is not in sight.

The constantly increasing number of grade crossings accidents, too, is a subject that is expected to cause considerable discussion at Chicago in connection with the growing demand for the elimination of grade crossings. Automobile accidents of one kind or another on the public highways killed 7,969 persons in 1919 according to the census figures for 1920 covering the Census Bureau's registration area, which embraces 80 per cent of the country's population. A total of 3,808 deaths occurred on the streets of the sixty-six largest cities of the country.

The deaths in 1919 from automobile accidents in the registration area showed an increase of 444 over those of 1918.

The enormous amount of automobile traffic on American roads and the consequent increase in liability to accident will be realized when it is considered that there are now 8,000,000 automobiles registered in the United States. In average of 1,000 to a state. In 1914, 1906 the number was only 48,000, and the number grew to 1,700,000. Twenty-five million Americans are now using Motor Cars. The actual vehicle-mile use of the roads, it is estimated has increased more than 500 per cent in the rural districts and 1000 per cent in those near the large center of population. There are 2,500,000 miles of rural highways in the United States and 40,000,000 automobile tires are now an annual necessity.

The Chicago meeting promises to be one of the greatest in points of attendance and in results ever held in the history of the good road movement. The governors of the several states and territories of this country and Canada as well as the mayors of two thousand American and Canadian cities have been asked to appoint official delegates to the meeting. In some instances governors and mayors will head their delegations in person. Seven thousand road and street contractors and thousands of army, automotive and chemical engineers, agriculturists, editors, bankers, motorists and large users of trucks, as well as officials of board of trade, chambers of commerce and other organizations interested in road and street improvement have been invited to attend. The congress also will be open to any and all persons interested in improving the highways of the country.

FASTING WIFE GETS HIS PROXY PRAYER

Danville, Ill., Jan. 10.—When his wife fasts and prays because Ernest Harrington will not join her church the husband to-day and yesterday, prayed for her by proxy. The Rev. Henry Green, an itinerant negro preacher, knelt down with Harrington in his yard and uttered a prayer. On each occasion the preacher made a dollar "touch" for his services.

While the husband was praying for his wife outside, her friends of the Pentecostal Church of God, which she wants him to join, also prayed and sang inside. Mrs. Harrington began her hunger strike forty-three days ago, but her husband apparently is no nearer becoming a church member now than he was then.

"She is like the man who caught the bear by the tail," said Harrington to-day. "She can't let loose now. She has lost seventy-five pounds, but is still going strong, although I believe she is sorry she started the thing. As for me, I am still standing pat. I believe my life is my own to live as I see fit and I do not intend to have any person force me to do a thing I feel is wrong." She will soon give it up, I have lived with her for 19 years and I never knew her to complete anything she undertook yet.

The Harrington home is guarded to prevent newspaper correspondents and movie picture operators from seeing the fasting woman, who has shrunk from 210 to 135 pounds, it is said.

Hundreds of letters and telegrams urging both to hold out are received every day. Religious fanatics implore the woman not to interrupt her fast, because the right must prevail, although one cynic wonders why if the Lord told her to begin her fast He doesn't tell her that it is time to quit, because it is of no use.

SIXTY-NINE PUBLIC TREATIES.

The Secretariat of the League of Nations publishes a modest summary of the work it has done in its first year, which was completed yesterday. It has undertaken half a dozen arbitrations administered mandates; studied concerted action against typhus, the opium traffic and white slavery; directed limitations of armaments; effected the repatriation of more than 100,000 prisoners of war.

A record of no mean value if it is added: "The registering of sixty-nine treaties, in accordance with the stipulations of the Treaty of Versailles."

The world has suffered enough from secret treaties. The Triple Alliance was secret. Article VII, the Balkan proviso, was publicly made known only after Italy had entered the war. Bismark's "reinsurance" understandings with Russia were necessarily secret—and treacherous. The Treaty of London for the settlement of the Adriatic problem the fate of Fiume, Trieste and the Trentino, which roused d'Aannunzio to his rebellion was secret. The "ghost of dozens of such old doings of professional diplomats in the dark."

If the League of Nations had done nothing else or further than the registering of these sixty-nine treaties for public access and information, it would still be the greatest year's work ever done by any international organization.

Thursday afternoon, Jan. 20, 1921 at Charlesville Grange in P. O. S. of A. Hall, Prof. Metzger will discuss "Would it be practical for Colerain and Snake Spring Twps to employ a supervising principal of schools, to take charge of Accounting Systems, compulsory attendance, teachers employment fund, compensation, ins., and reports to County and State and all other reports, also to visit schools to assist teachers and to fill vacancies temporarily." The School Directors of Colerain and Snake Spring Twps and all other persons interested are invited to be present. Clayton Smith, Secy.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JANUARY 16

OUR ALL FOR THE KINGDOM.

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 19:16-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself—Matt. 19:19.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Matt. 6:19-26, 19:14-15, Mark 10:13-16, 1 Tim. 6:9, 10, 17-19.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Children's Friend.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Gaining by Giving.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—
Money, a Help or a Hindrance.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—
Money and the Kingdom.

Our lesson title is likely to be misunderstood and therefore the teaching misapplied. Christ did not directly nor by implication teach that eternal life could be obtained by parting with possessions.

1. The Young Man (v. 16).
For a full view of the characteristics of this man see Mark 10:17-30 and Luke 18:18-30.

1. His virtues. (1) Courageous (Mark 10:17). He was of high standing—a rich young ruler (Luke 18:18, 23). To come to Jesus at this time meant ostracism from the Jewish community. (2) Earnest (Mark 10:17).
He came and knelt before Jesus. (3)
High aspirations (v. 16). He wanted eternal life. Though much taken up with the things of this present life, he felt the need of preparing for a life beyond. (4) Pious and moral (v. 20). From his youth up he professed to have conformed to God's holy law. (5) Confidence in Christ (v. 16).
He believed that Christ could inform him of the "good things" to be done to inherit eternal life.

2. His errors. (1) About Christ
(v. 16). He esteemed Jesus to be good, but did not apprehend Him as God.
(2) Concerning himself. He was self-righteous. He thought he was good and could do something good. (3) Concerning eternal life. He had a defective theology—he thought that eternal life could be obtained by good works. He did not know that the only way to get eternal life was to receive it as a gift from God (Rom.
6:23).

11. How the Lord Dealt With Him
(vv. 17-22).

1. His Question—"Why callest thou me good?" (v. 17). His object in this was to lead the young man to a correct apprehension as to who He was. Before giving him a chance to answer.
He declared that only God was good.
As if to say, "I am good and therefore God." If He is not God He is not good; for if He was not what He professed to be He was an arch impostor, for He made himself to be equal with God.

2. Jesus' answer to the young man's question (v. 17-20). "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." Christ met him here on his own ground, namely, that of the law.
The law reveals sin—shuts the mouth of the self-righteous sinner (Rom. 3:19, 20). If one insists on getting life by doing something, the law is what must be done, kept. This no one has ever done, nor indeed can do, for the law curses instead of saves (Gal. 3:10).

3. Christ's command (vv. 21, 22). In Christ's command to go and sell his possessions and distribute to the poor,
He put His finger upon the weak spot.
His going away sorrowful proves that he was covetous and did not love his neighbor as himself. When he had to make the supreme decision between Jesus and his possessions he chose his wealth and let Jesus go.

III. The Relationship of the Rich to the Kingdom (vv. 23-26).

1. It is difficult for the rich to enter the kingdom (vv. 23, 24). This difficulty lies not in the possession of riches, for a man may possess great riches and be an heir of the kingdom.
Many of the most useful men in ancient and modern times have been men of wealth, but they like Abraham chose to "dwell in tents"—to believe and obey God at any cost—looking to a city that hath foundations. The difficulty lies in trusting in riches.

2. Entrance into the kingdom is possible, though difficult (vv. 25, 26). (1)
It is possible for the grace of God to sanctify riches. The mighty hindering influence may become a great influence for good in the hands of a regenerated and consecrated soul. (2) It is possible for the grace of God to open a man's eyes that he may see his downward course and repent. (3) It is possible for the grace of God to change a man from self-seeking to self-sacrifice. (4)
It is possible for the grace of God to make men humble.

IV. Reward for Following Christ
(vv. 27-30).

Those who turn their backs upon their kindred and possessions for the sake of Christ shall receive an hundredfold in this life and eternal life in the world to come.

Need to Be Born Again.

The root of all dissatisfaction and discontent with self and with one's surroundings, and with one's prospects, can never be reached until we go down to the will of God in our soul's birth and soul's mission, and make the discovery of that will for us, and the doing it our chief aim and hope. No change in life's circumstances, no larger work, no happier outlook will be enough. We ourselves need to be born again; it is not our outward life that needs to be refashioned.—Newman Smyth.

Great Excitement Prevails Among Residents of the District—Mob Violence Is Feared—Reinforcements Rushed to Spot.

Seale, Ala.—Three members of an armed Negro band which wounded a deputy sheriff and four other members of a searching party have been captured by a posse headed by Sheriff Ragland, near Pittsview. The Sheriff is bringing the prisoners to this place.

The deputy and his four men were in pursuit of a Negro accused of having attacked a white woman. They traced the fugitive to a Negro house and were met by a volley which wounded all five. The posse retired until reinforcements arrived when the house was stormed again and the trio of Negroes captured.

There is great excitement among residents of the region and more officers have gone to the scene fearing mob violence.

Ross Dozier, the wounded deputy,
and his companion were summoned by telephone by the husband of the woman attacked and who was struck down when he answered his wife's cries for help.

112 groceries in Greater New York were arrested on charges of profiteering here. They are charged with violation of the Lever Act. The charges against Reiter and Evans, sworn to by John S. Johnson, special investigator for the Department of Justice, allege that the anti-profiteering law was violated by the sale of 113,000 pounds of

The "U.S." Walrus

Three reasons why you'll like the new "U.S." Walrus

- 1—Can be cleaned instantly
- 2—Slips on over your leather shoes
- 3—Fleece-lined—warm and dry

NO more dirty, mud-clogged overshoes! Here's an overshoe that you can clean instantly—no matter how dirty it is! Dash a pail of water over it—or hold it right under a faucet—and every trace of mud washes quickly off its smooth rubber surface.

When you have to go out for wood, or to milk, or for any of those dozens of odd jobs around the place—you want an overshoe that you can slip on and off in a hurry. Here it is—buckle it on in a second—unbuckle it and push it off with your toe when you're through.

Ever work on a job all day long with wet, cold feet? If you have, you'll be glad of the soft, fleecy lining in this new overshoe that keeps your feet warm and comfortable. Dry, too—it's absolutely watertight.

Built for the hardest wear

Made by the oldest and largest rubber manufacturer in the world, the U. S.
Walrus is built for the roughest wear. Its sole consists of heavy layers of the finest rubber. All other points of strain are specially reinforced.

Ask your dealer to show you the new U. S. Walrus. Look over the rest of this U. S. line—boots, bootees, arctics—whatever you need. Every one is backed by over half a century of experience.
The rubber comes from our own plantations—the whole process of manufacture is supervised by experts.

Always look for the U. S. Seal—it means solid wear and long service for your money.

WATCH THAT COLD!

The Lungs are Endangered until you Expel it

Head colds are not the trivial ailments many consider them. The passages in the nostrils lead down into the lungs; hence the cold is a threat of pneumonia. Influenza or catarrh also may result from neglect.

Krew-Pina, the famous household ointment, affords prompt relief in all cases of cold. It is scientifically compounded entirely of simple home remedies, including Oil of Pine and other volatile oils, in a petroleum base—absolutely harmless, but powerful in its action both through the pores of the skin and directly on the inflamed membranes by vapor contact.

Rub well in on the throat and chest, and apply in the nostrils. Draw the bed clothes up about the nose and inhale the medicinal vapors the heat of the body causes the ointment to give off.
Repeat nightly until relieved.

Krew-Pina should be kept on hand for relief in cases of bronchitis, croup, colds, coughs, neuralgia, burns, cuts, bruises and many other common ailments. 30c and 60c jars with printed directions—at your druggist's.

Free Sample of Krew-Pina will be sent to any address on request.

Ossian, a mythic hero and bard, is said to have lived in the third century, and to have been the son of Fingal, a Caledonian prince and hero, whom he accompanied on various expeditions. The story goes that Ossian was carried away by his lady hind-mother to the "isle of the ever-young," but he returned later, and then old, blind and alone "Ossian after the Feinn," he told the story of the heroes to St. Patrick. In 1760-63
James Macpherson published two epics, in which he claimed to be translations from Ossian's poems.

Fordson

More and more every day the demand for the Fordson Tractor increases because the Fordson has demonstrated so much usefulness, so much economy, so much labor saving, so much money saving, along so many lines of activity. The farmer has discovered that not only for plowing, harrowing, discing, seeding, mowing, reaping and threshing, but a multitude of other uses; cutting wood, feed, grinding feed, churning, washing, furnishing water in the house, making electric light possible in the house and around the barns, so that, as a matter of fact, there is hardly an hour in the day when the Tractor cannot be made a profitable servant. There is ditching to do, there are roads to fix, and so on all down along the line of the numerous calls that constantly face the farmer the Fordson steps in and does the work, shoulders the complete burden of the toil and the hard work, one might almost say "drudgery".

This is the Age of Machinery, the day when man plans the day's work, or the year's work, and then turns it over to the Tractor to execute. Get the book "The Fordson at Work", because it is free. If you cannot call for it, write and we will mail it to you. The Tractor is not only a necessity to every farmer but it is an established utility along a great many commercial lines. Our allotment is limited to so many each month. Let's have your order now.

In Common Things.

A man must invest himself near at hand and in common things, and be content with a steady and moderate return, if he would know the blessedness of a cheerful heart and the sweetness of a walk over the round earth. —John Burroughs.

Where He Shows.

Chester was slow in wit, but he appreciated the aptness of speech in one of his playmates, evidently, for when asked why he was anxious to be in Jack's company so much he replied, "Oh, everything he says has a kick in it."

Largest Wooden Building.

The parliament building in Wellington, New Zealand, is the largest wooden structure in the world.

Peculiar Disease.

Arithmomania—the medical name for another disease—is full of interest. In this the patient has the irresistible impulse to count a certain number of times before doing anything. One case recorded is of a girl who had to tap on the edge of the bed nine times before getting into it; a hundred times before brushing her teeth; to knock three times on a window by the side of the door, and a similar number of times on the door itself before she would unlock it.

Constantinople.

Within its girdling walls Constantinople rises, like Rome on its seven low hills, crowned by the splendors of mosques, whose gleaming cupolas and minarets, silhouetted against the blue sky, look down on the waters of the Bosphorus. A strange, incongruous huddle of palatial buildings and tumble-down hovels, of stately avenues, and filth-littered lanes, flanked by malodorous bazars, through which the human tide streams and surges.

Private Park.

If the rear yard is properly planted with a border of flowering shrubs and perennial flowers, has a velvet green lawn and a few shade or fruit trees, it will give the family a quiet, peaceful little private park, in which all can enjoy the moonlight during the hot summer evenings without making a long, tiresome trip to the parks. This is the height of pleasure afforded by a well-planted home yard.

Wonderful Shakespeare.

Among the English authors, Shakespeare has incomparably excelled all others. That noble extravagance of fancy, which he had in so great perfection, thoroughly qualified him to touch the weak, superstitious part of his readers' imagination and made him capable of succeeding where he had nothing to support him besides the strength of his own genius. —Addison.

Motors Displace Mules.

The First cavalry, stationed at Nogales, Ariz., has abandoned mules in favor of motor equipment, but the change is not so revolutionary as it sounds, because you can swear just as fluently at a balky carburetor as you can at a stubborn quadruped. And it does just as much good. —The Home Sector.

Protect the Song Birds.

Song birds may be protected from cats by winding four or five strands of barbed wire around the tree trunks. Cats have a great dislike for barbed wire and will not cross it. The wire will not harm the trees and can be removed when the birds leave.

Ham Timbales.—Take two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-fourth of a cupful of stale bread crumbs, two-thirds of a cupful of milk, one cupful of cooked chopped ham, one-half tablespoonful of chopped parsley, two eggs, salt and pepper. Melt the butter, add the bread crumbs and the milk and cook five minutes, stirring constantly. Add the ham, parsley and eggs slightly beaten. Season with salt and pepper and turn into buttered individual molds, filling them two-thirds full. Set in a pan of water, cover with buttered paper and bake twenty minutes. Serve with:

Bechamel Sauce.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of boiled ham liquor or broth prepared from the trimmings and bone, with water, one slice of onion, one slice of carrot, a bit of bayleaf, a sprig of parsley, six pepper corns, one-fourth of a cupful of butter, one-fourth of a cupful of flour, one cupful of scalded milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of cayenne. Cook the stock with the seasonings twenty minutes, then strain. Melt the fat, add the flour and when well blended add the hot, seasoned stock and scalded milk. Cook until smooth and thick.

Whey Jelly.—Take one pint of strained whey, one-half cupful of sugar, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of gelatin dissolved in one-fourth cupful of cold water, the juice and grated rind of a lemon and an orange. Bandits Beat and Rob New Yorker on Public Road Near Ambridge

STEAL MACHINE AND $120

Man Trained for Several Miles—Is Left Unconscious By Roadside—All the Ohio Valley Police Are On the Lookout for the Robbers.

Ambridge, Pa.—Jumping to the running-board of their victim's machine, as their own automobile drew alongside, automobile bandits held up Frank Volroux of New York City, and after beating him and robbing him of $120, escaped, taking his machine with them.

Volroux, who was en route from New York to Los Angeles, told police the bandits, traveling in a touring car, had been trailing him for several miles. After he passed through Ambridge, and was approaching the Lehighville bridge, he said, the bandits gradually increased their speed until they came alongside him.

One of the men then made a flying leap to the running board of Volroux's car, drawing a revolver at the same time, and commanding him to stop. As he brought his automobile to a halt, the bandits drove their car ahead, making his escape impossible.

The other bandit then left their car, dragged Volroux to the road, where they took his money and beat him, leaving him, half unconscious by the roadside. After recovering, he made his way on foot back to Ambridge, where he reported the robbery. His description of the bandit car was sent to all police stations in the Ohio valley.

MR. HARDING'S DISCOVERY

Warren G. Harding elected President of the United States yesterday when the Electors who were chosen Nov. 2 met in their respective States and voted for President and Vice President in accordance with the technical provisions of the constitution.

Government is a very simple thing after all," remarked Mr. Harding during the campaign, in the careless, ignorant manner of a man who had never faced any of the real responsibilities of government. Although nearly two months will elapse before he is inaugurated President of the United States, Mr. Harding has already discovered to his astonishment that government is not a very simple thing after all. Even one of the simplest things about the duties of the President—the selection of a Cabinet—has been found so difficult that Mr. Harding has made practically no progress and is publicly lamenting the "intrigue and untruth" he must guard himself against.

The New York Tribune now reports that "Mr. Harding has been worn and distressed almost beyond endurance by the disputes and bickerings engendered in his attempt to pick a Cabinet by consultation." If he is worn and distressed by the rivalries and jealousies over his Cabinet, what will be his condition when he is compelled to deal with the practical problems of government and take the definite programme and policy?

Mr. Harding is already the victim of a situation which he helped to create. As a Senator he had no hesitancy in joining forces with his Old Guard associates in a campaign of "intrigue and untruth" against President Wilson. That was regarded as shrewd partisan politics, and it succeeded to the degree that President Wilson was shattered in health and the ratification of the treaty was defeated through an alliance of Republican Senators and the hypnotized vote.

Through the prestige that they acquire in beating the treaty the Republican Senate leaders were able to take possession of the Republican organization and the Republican National Convention. They nominated Mr. Harding for President because they intended him to be their creature, and naturally they refused to cancel the mortgage. That is the source of most of Mr. Harding's anxiety and distress.

Mr. Harding is the kind of politician who thinks that government can be conducted by slapping everybody on the back and urging him to be a good fellow. The Old Guard believes in smashing everybody who gets in its way. That is the progress by which it gained power and that is the progress by which it holds power it gained. Mr. Harding's scheme if infinite, compromise does not fit in with the Old Guard plans, and his theories of party harmony bear little resemblance to the actual facts that confront him at every turn.

The result is that he is unable to make up his mind about anything, whether it is a cabinet or a programme of legislation or a foreign policy. Even so really simple a matter as the Borah resolution for a naval holiday, which if it were to become effective would save the Government at least $1,000,000,000 during the four years of the Harding Administration, finds the President-elect halting and indecisive in the clash of the "best minds."

Government seemed "a very simple thing after all" when the energies and resources of the Republican Party were centered in a destructive assault on President Wilson and the treaty of peace. Government ceases to be "a very simple thing after all" when the responsibility is shifted from the attacked to the attackers and a constructive programme must be substituted for a destructive programme. "Worn and distressed almost beyond endurance" as he may be, Mr. Harding is only in the initial stages of his political disillusionment. Four years from now he will look back on his own attitude as a Senator toward President Wilson with feelings of chagrin and horror. He will know then what it all meant.

Mr. Harding hasn't done anything to show any mind of his own since he came into prominence by being nominated. The other day he sent his inaugural instructions to Washington and when the telegrams arrived amidst an avalanche of talk of millions to be spent on his inauguration the Republican papers all came out on "HARDING'S WONDERFUL BACKBONE." The truth of the matter is that the whole thing was staged. McLean went to see him, then Knox went to see him. There was to be a wonderful outlay of money to usher Harding into the chair. Seats and Stages, Inaugural Ball, and Confections, Bands, Marines, etc. then Harding was to come out and send a telegram calling it off before anything begun except talk which was planned then Harding was to be showed up in the papers as having LOTS OF BACKBONE by calling off all the preparations Harding the great economizer and the man with the backbone, the first of the kind yet and that fictitious.

PRUNING FOR DISEASE CONTROL

When a fruit grower goes out to prune a tree he has in mind various ideas in regard to the process, which leads him to use the saw or shears to attain certain definite results. He desires a shapely, open tree with plenty of fruit buds and so low that it will be easy to pick. Why can he not include in these results the elimination of diseases also, and thus make his pruning operations help in the constant struggle against the ravages of disease? There are many ways in which the pruner can get such results at the expenditure of very little extra time or labor, if only this item of disease control is added to the other pruning ideals. The removal of rotten fruit, cutting out knots, cankers, dead twigs and branches, close cutting so as to avoid water holding pockets, cleaning out wounds and dead areas, and painting the surface of larger cuts—all these assist materially in keeping the orchard free from fungi, which use the dead and dying wood as a base from which to attack the living parts, as well as to get rid of many insects which hibernate or multiply in the diseased portions of the tree.

CASHING IN ON THE TARIFF.

The Old Guard in Congress is meeting with difficulties in its attempt to pay up for November's glorious victory at the polls in the customary terms of more tariff protection. It was thought that the job could be done with less trouble and disturbance at this trough of public privileges if the class claimants were dealt with one at a time. But this is proving not to be the case.

Through the Emergency Farm-Products Tariff Bill, which has already passed the House, the grangers had been hooked to cash in first and the other privileged ones were to trail along after in the idea that they would fare better if they bided their time. But they refused to trail, and any one of them cannot get his head into the trough first of all, than no one shall get there first of all.

The fish interests of Gloucester have accordingly met and prepared to raid Washington for a neck and neck charge with the grangers. The sugar interests are moving in the same direction. Potash and putty are also on the road. So are the manufacturing perfumers and the celluloid artificers and the toy-makers, not to forget the more familiar and bulky feeders at the trough, such as woolens and cottons and so on.

The unfortunate consequence of this unexpected scramble for first place or no preferences at the Old Guard's pay-window, to change the figure of speech, is a hold-up for the grangers and a riot on its hands for the Old Guard. But why should it have been unexpected? Old hands at the seat of a tariff settlement for votes delivered can recall many attempts to pay off piecemeal. But can one of them recall when they did not have to give up and pay off through a blanket bill?

The report that the granger-preference bill is to be set aside for a revival of the whole Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act is probably true.

DO YOU CATCH COLD EASILY?

Your Vitality Is Low—Resistance WEAK

YOU NEED PEPTO-MANGAN

Rich, Red Blood Will Strengthen You and Put You on Your Feet—Able to Resist Colds

Your system normally healthy should never catch cold. Your body is adjusted to take care of sudden changes in the weather.

It is when you are run down and your vitality is low that your body cannot adjust itself. Then you take cold.

If you keep your blood in good condition, with plenty of red corpuscles, you will be strong and your body will easily adjust itself to sudden changes. You can throw off the cold germs that go flying into the air when somebody with a cold sneezes.

Red-blooded men, women and children eat well. They have plenty of energy. They go along with a smile because they feel right.

Try Pepto-Mangan, the successful tonic. It is a wonderful blood builder. Take it for a while till you feel right.

Pepto-Mangan is widely and heartily endorsed by physicians. It is effective and easy to take. It is prepared in both liquid and tablet form. The medicinal properties are the same.

Sold at any drug store. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." Ask for it by name, and be sure the full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," is on the package. Advertisement.

Take Wives' Surnames.

In some parts of Scotland the fishermen very frequently call themselves by their wives' surnames. Thus James Smith married Mary Green, and himself called himself "Green."

STEEL MAGNATES AND BIG BUSINESS IN GENERAL AGAINST LIMITATIONS OF ARMA-MENTS

Washington, D. C. Jan. 6.—The Steel magnates to whom battleships and cannons and other munitions of war are a source of great profit, have become scared by the phenomenal success which has resulted from the Crusade to limit armaments by international agreement. These lobbyists have flocked to Washington and are working like beavers to stem the tide of universal demand that competition in naval building cease.

But there efforts are so far in vain. They have, it is said, appealed to President-elect Harding, without success. The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, unmoved by their arguments, will, it is expected, report favorably to-day on the Borah resolution.

An amazing story comes from London, cabled there from New York by P. W. Wilson, former member of Parliament, now American Correspondent of the London Daily News. He says Republican Senators and Canadian Statesmen have made a secret agreement by which the navies of the British Dominions are to work as one with the United States Navy in the event of trouble in the Pacific.

Endorsements for limitation of armament came from Col. E. M. House, Samuel Gompers, Stephen Leacock, the Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Duluth and many others, including Canadian financiers and the leader of the Opposition in the Ottawa Parliament.

Ministers and laymen are all joining the army of protests to a big army and navy started by the New York World several days ago.

Why Clear Nights Are Colder.

A clear, bright starlight night in winter is always much colder than a cloudy one. The reason for this is that the heat of the earth is always thrown off more quickly when there is nothing to intercept it. Clouds act as a kind of blanket, and in preventing the earth's heat from escaping, tend to keep the atmosphere warm.

The Cone of Cold.

So hard is the cone of a pine in our western forests that the imprisoned seeds cannot be propagated in the ordinary way. The best way is to burn the cone over a hot fire until it bursts, when the seeds escape. When forest fires sweep the country these pine cones have their chance, and from them new trees grow.

"Where glasses are made right"

A VICIOUS CIRCLE.

Insisting that Secretary Daniels "has set out to construct a fleet so strong as would reduce all others to a mere cipher and incidentally enable America to dictate her conception of right to others," the Japanese Ambassador to London proceeds to present the case for his own Government's naval programme.

"We, as a sea power, cannot content to be at the mercy of any other navy. That is one of the reasons, why painful as is the burden entailed by our naval and military estimates, the nation will bear it, I won't say gladly but resignedly."

With due respect to the Japanese Ambassador, this is the old jargon of a discredited diplomacy. Japan is no more at the mercy of the United States Navy than the United States is at the mercy of the British Navy. The Ambassador's argument is one of the fictions exploited by diplomats and politicians on the theory that the elements of intimidation must enter into all successful international negotiations.

Before the war the Japanese Navy was out-classed by the British Navy, the German Navy and the American Navy. It is still outclassed by the British Navy and the American Navy, neither of which menaces any legitimate Japanese interests.

The New Republic displays much better statesmanship than the Japanese Ambassador when it says of the proposed naval holiday:

"Therefore the New York World is on safe ground. Senator Borah is on safe ground. The President, if he calls a disarmament conference, will be on safe ground. The safest ground America can occupy is to have a navy larger than Japan's but not so large as to menace Japan; smaller than Great Britain's, but not so small that the British Navy is a menace to us. That is exactly what we have now. Why not maintain this status by an agreement with both Britain and Japan not to disturb the existing ratio?" Any other policy spells a new era in competitive armament, with all that implies to the economic life of the world.

The United States, Great Britain and Japan are already building navies against one another. Although the British Government is presenting no new naval programme and is waiting to see what the United States will do, there is not the slightest possibility that the British Government, short of absolute bankruptcy, will surrender a naval supremacy which is the sole protection of the country against starvation in time of war. The United States, on the other hand, cannot be starved by anybody, but its naval programme is now dictated largely by fears of Japan, which in turn is building against the United States, completing the vicious circle.

Nobody benefits or can benefit from this competition except the armament-makers. Everybody else loses. The three nations are already levying taxes that are beyond their productive capacity to carry and to carry safely. All three of them are facing problems of unemployment. Money that ought to be turned back to promote industry and give work is poured into the coffers of Government to be spent on armament that is not needed and that would not be required if the naval policies of the United States, Great Britain and Japan were subjected to the test of a little plain common sense.

If these policies, however, are to be controlled by the diplomacy of prestige, which is the intimation of the Japanese Ambassador's statement, then all three Governments are headed straight toward economic disaster.

Harry Bechtel.

Official Tester.

The Farm Bureau was particularly active in Morrison's Cove last fall and as a result the First Bedford Cow Testing Association has been organized and working since December 1st.

This is a beginning along dairy improvement lines for the farmers of Bedford County and may be extended to other sections to be followed by breeding work.

The association is full with 26 members and others are asking to get in. Members are: H. P. Hull, Wilson Koontz, Orlo Blough, Howard Baker, Ray Reasey, Elmer Baker, Sherman Baker, Jacob Hoover, Jacob Sell, Paul Fetter, W. F. Kagarise, Merle King, Harrison Zimmerman, Nelson Guyer, A. B. Replogle, Andrew Baker, Clemment Fetter, David L. Baker, Ira Escheleman, Clarence Detwiler, Abraham Replogle, Elmer Wyles, C. P. Holsinger, Homer Harclerode, Cyrus Bechtel and Lloyd Clapper.

County Agent L. R. Mollenauer says there are 3 essentials to successful dairying, viz: "feeding, weeding and breeding." The cow testing association makes correct feeding and weeding possible since the hired tester advises for the best feed mixtures and submits a record of the profit or loss per cow for a year. This is obtained by regular visits once a month when all costs of production are fed labor etc. and also the fat test and total amount of fat and milk for the year are recorded. Cows showing a loss instead of a profit may be weeded out.

Breeding is cared for to the extent that offsprings are kept from good rows to form the future herd. When bull associations are formed no bull will be brought into the country unless their dams have produced around 1000 lbs of butter a year.

Some idea of the breeding value of such bulls can be gained when it is estimated that the average production of the cows in Pennsylvania is about 170 lbs. of butter or only 4000 lbs. of milk a year.

The Farm Bureau Executive committee completed the business of the year 1920 at a meeting in the Farm Bureau office at Bedford.

After reports from committees the County Agent was asked to "give a brief outline of the Year's accomplishments which included activities in orchard management, dairy improvement, corn and wheat variety tests, poultry culling, control of insects and fungus diseases and many projects of a miscellaneous nature."

Prof. F. W. Weaver, State Leader of County Agents was present and discussed Farm Bureau affairs with the committee. An interesting phase of the meeting was the decision to adopt the community plan of organization in putting on this year's program of work. This calls for committees in communities who will meet with the County Agent for the purpose of selecting improvement projects suitable to the section in question.

The annual meeting to which all farmers come to discuss lines of work needed in the county was set for February 3rd. Two speakers from the Pennsylvania State College have been arranged for at this time.

Varnish to Imitate Ground Glass.

To make a varnish to imitate ground glass, dissolve 90 grains of sandarac and 20 grains of mastic in two ounces washed methylated ether, and add in small quantities, sufficient benzine to make it dry with a suitable grain, too little making the varnish too transparent and an excess making it crapy. The quantity of benzine required depends upon the quality, from one-half to one and one-half ounces, or even more. The best results are obtained from a medium quality. It is important to use pure washed ether, free from spirit.

MARION PILGRIMS DECEIVE SELVES

EXPERIENCED POLITICIANS DO NOT BELIEVE HARDING HAS MADE ANY PROMISES.

WISH FATHERS THE THOUGHT

President-Elect Undoubtedly Following Example of His Predecessors in Refraining From Making Direct Pledges of Appointment or Policy.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—Every four years, or at the outside every eight years, there is a heavy pilgrimage to the home of the President-elect by the Democrats or by the Republicans. This year is no exception to the rule, and Washington is watching with mingled interest and amusement the going forth of the pilgrims to the shrine of the incoming one at Marion.

If the pilgrims of the past were to be believed, and if the pilgrims of the present are to be believed, Presidents-elect of the United States are the greatest promise makers in the world, and likewise if there is a thought that the promises are to be fulfilled they must have memories which are like the proverbial ones of the men whose minds are like wax to receive impressions and like marble to retain them.

"The wish is father to the thought" is a saying as old as that which has to do with impressionable and retaining mentalities. Washington believes that in nine cases out of ten the pilgrims who come away from Marion thinking and saying that "things are to be thus and so" in almost every case are persons to whom "the wish is father to the thought."

To go no further back than 1896, William McKinley met the pilgrims face to face and talked with them, and if they were to be believed, promised them many things. Woodrow Wilson in 1913 met thousands of those whose steps were New Jerseyward bent. Washington in the past heard the same tales then concerning the certain accomplishment of this thing or that thing, and of the promises that had been made on this matter or that matter, or on the appointment of this man or that man.

Skeptical About Promises.

Today in Marion the scenes of other days are being re-enacted and Washington statesmanship and, near statesmanship looks on smilingly and under breath speaks of the day when the pilgrims are to wake up and to get a somewhat sharp sense of disillusionment.

All the old Washington politicians say that no President-elect ever makes a direct promise until just before he can drop the "elect" and write his name with the prefix President. At a town in Ohio today, as at a town in New Jersey in 1913, there are arriving day by day politicians who know what they want, doctrinaires who know what they want, theorists who know what they want, advisers who know what they want to say, and scores of others who think they know what they want but probably don't.

So far as one can determine, all of these pilgrims on returning from Marion, as they or their like returned from the other places in the years gone by, have a deep-seated conviction that they have carried their points either in having advice accepted or in securing the promise that somebody or other is to get a high place in government. Washington says there is "nothing to it."

Up to the present time the lists of men who are "certain" to be appointed to cabinet positions has reached that number which the Psalmist puts down as the allotted years of a man's life, three score and ten. There are only ten cabinet jobs. If sixty men are to be placed congress will have to do some hurry-up legislation in order to provide departments enough to go around.

Praise Doesn't Mean Appointment.

Sometimes Presidents-elect are compelled in self-defense, and to save their reputations for veracity, to issue specific statements in denial that they have promised Dick that Tom shall have this job, or Harry that Bill shall have that job. In Washington the old sagers say that if a President-elect tells a petitioner in behalf of Bill that Bill is a good fellow, the petitioner instantly takes it for granted that Bill is going to be secretary of state, or secretary of the treasury, or be made ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the Court of Saint James, or consul general at London, or ministering angel to the Hot-tentots.

Within a short time the names of four men have been given as of those who are certain to be appointed secretary of state—Charles E. Hughes, Philander Chase Knox, David Jayne Hill and George Sutherland. Not all of these gentlemen can occupy the chief chair at the President's table at the same time. It has been suggested in Washington that they might serve a year each, thus satisfying all the gentlemen concerned and probably those others who are sticklers for rotation in office.

Who Will Be Harding's Secretary?

President-Elect Harding has not yet named definitely the man who is to be his secretary when he takes possession of the White House in March. Gossip has it that either George Christian, the senator's present private secretary, or Richard Washburn Child, the writer, who was at Marion most of the past summer, will be tendered the important post.

Of course, Senator Harding may decide on somebody else. Whoever it is that comes to the White House as secretary to the President, in order to retain his popularity and his usefulness, will be obliged to live up to a high mark of tradition. There have been some mighty efficient secretaries to hold sway—away is really the right word—in the offices of the White House during the administrations that have passed.

The memories of a few Washington correspondents go back to the days of "Lige" Halford, who was secretary under McKinley, and of George B. Cortelyou, secretary under the same President and for an exceedingly short time associated in the White House with the Roosevelt administration.

Loeb Was More Than Secretary. President Roosevelt appointed William Loeb, Jr., whom he had known in Albany while he was governor of New York, as his secretary, and Loeb held office through the first and second administrations of Roosevelt. Loeb was something more than the President's secretary. He was the friend and confidant of Theodore Roosevelt. Moreover, he was allowed to speak for the President in many matters of moment. In other words, if newspaper correspondents or senators or representatives went to Loeb to find out something, and it was impossible to reach the President to get the answer, Loeb almost always would take it upon himself to say what was necessary.

Mr. Loeb frequently was the spokesman for Theodore Roosevelt, being able as he was, through association in conferences, to know almost invariably just how the President felt on all kinds of subjects, and also to know definitely enough whether or not he was justified in speaking. Today Loeb is connected with the welfare department of the great American Smelting and Refining company.

When President Taft came into office he brought to the White House with him as his secretary Fred Warner Carpenter, a young man who had been his private secretary when he was secretary of war. Very soon after he entered the White House Mr. Warner was appointed minister to Morocco, and he sailed for his African post. He was succeeded by Charles D. Norton of New York, and about a year thereafter Mr. Norton was succeeded by Charles D. Hilles, also of New York.

Mr. Norton is now a vice president of a New York city bank and Mr. Hilles is connected with a great insurance company in an executive capacity. Hilles, by the way, has been mentioned as a possibility for a cabinet position under the incoming administration. He is the Republican national committeeman from the state of New York and was exceedingly active in the last political campaign.

Tumulty Will Practice Law.

Woodrow Wilson's secretary is Joseph P. Tumulty, who had served in a like capacity for Mr. Wilson prior to his coming to the White House. Mr. Tumulty came to Washington with the President, and in all human probability will leave it with him. The relation between Woodrow Wilson and Tumulty is close and companionable.

The President not long ago told his secretary that he would appoint him to the position of judge of the United States customs court of appeals if he desired the place. Mr. Tumulty declined the honor and will practice law in Washington when Mr. Wilson becomes an ex-President of the United States.

It cannot be said that the position of secretary to the President is one that is sought for. No man seeks it, because it is a place which cannot be asked for, but which must be given to a man whom the President knows intimately, for whom he feels profound respect and in whose judgment he has every confidence. The secretary to the President can come about as near to undoing the President as it is possible for a President of the United States to be undone.

The secretary must be congenial, tactful and firm or yielding as the occasion demands. He has a hundred potential critics every day. He must know the status of every person who calls at the White House, must know what he or she wants and whether or not the errand of the visitor is of sufficient importance to require that the President should be seen personally by the caller. Everybody who goes to the White House wants to see the President, and therefore it is easy enough to see how tactful a secretary must be when it is necessary that he shall turn the visitor away with his wish ungratified.

Ungentle Hint.

Mabel and Ethel, having been engaged as clerks in the service of a bank, were instructed how to comply with the wishes of those customers who wrote asking to have their bank-books made up and returned to them. All went well for a time, but gradually their occasional five-minutes' leave from the office broadened into half hours.

This caused some indignation among the male members of the staff, until one of them had a bright idea. Mabel and Ethel, adjourning as usual to their cloakroom one morning for a quiet chat, were confronted with the following notice posted prominently across the mirror:

"Please make up and return!"

Five Minute Chats on Our Presidents

By JAMES MORGAN

(Copyright, 1920, by James Morgan.)

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

1825—John Quincy Adams inaugurated sixth president, aged fifty-seven.
1830-48—In congress.
1831—Presented first petition against slavery.
1848—February 23, death of Adams at the capitol. Aged eighty.

THE chieftainship of every great nation still passed from father to son until the presidency of the United States was created, when the first free-for-all race and an even start for the highest prize was opened to the sons of men regardless of the accidents of birth. In this fair test, new blood has won every time with only two exceptions in a century and a quarter.

Even John Quincy Adams did not win the race, but was outrun at the polls by Andrew Jackson, the son of an immigrant. Political parties having disappeared in 1824, four men entered the contest and deadlocked the electoral college, which left the house of representatives to choose from among the three highest candidates. This eliminated the fourth man—Henry Clay—who aided in the election of Adams and who received from the new president the appointment of secretary of state.

The only non-partisan administration the country ever has had was not a shining example of success. Uncompromising, alone, John Quincy Adams stalked his solitary way, never once turning to the right or to the left from the strait and narrow path of independence. With no sense of humor to relieve his sense of self-righteousness, to light up his view of his fellows or to thaw his own icy virtues, it was impossible for his supporters to feel any enthusiasm for him.

John Quincy Adams led the simple life in the White House. Getting up at 5, he built his fire, read his daily portion of the Bible and while the government clerks still slept, he took his walk or swim.

John Quincy Adams alone has solved the problem of ex-presidents. He forgot that he had been president at all and went to work like any other citizen.

With his houses in Quincy and Boston mortgaged and the income from his estate too slender for the support of his family, John Quincy Adams heard the bark of the wolf at his door as in his gloomy fancy he closed it upon public life in his sixty-second year. When some neighbors ventured to ask the next year if it would be beneath his dignity to represent the old Plymouth Rock district in congress, this great American, who had been a senator, a minister at the courts of The Hague, Berlin, St. Petersburg and London, a secretary of state and a president, replied that he was not above serving the people as one of the selectmen of his town.

Washington was aghast at the sight of an ex-president taking his seat in the hurly-burly of the lower house only two years after leaving the White House. Without joining the Democrats or the Whigs, with no faction about him, John Quincy Adams faced alone the Jackson administration which had supplanted his own and alone he met a swarm of his old-time critics on a level. Under his incessant pounding, the majority against the right of petition fell session by session until it disappeared entirely in 1844. He had won his long fight against the gag rule and his diary is lit up with his rejoicing in victory.

His life was crowned. His work was done. Still he labored on. Although he fell in a Boston street under a stroke of paralysis, he insisted upon returning to his duties in congress, where the members stood as he entered the hall and cheered him on his way to his seat. A year afterward, as he seemed, about to rise to address the speaker, he suddenly pitched forward upon the floor.

The veteran had been mortally stricken on the field. Although he lingered two days, he was not removed from the capitol, but remained in a little room off the old hall of the house. There, still at his post, died this old and devoted servant of his country.

Chapter IX.

"But we needn't care," Katherine said afterward, "she doesn't bother us much. For my part I can't see how Cousin John stands her."

"You look up Mrs. Curtis," I suppose," she said, "one of the things we've seen in a house run by an old man and a grieving widower."

"Nothing of a father with a lost somewhere in the world," supplemented Katherine.

"There's no danger of Caroline's returning after all these years," said Mrs. Curtis. "If—if—that girl hadn't come, Paul wouldn't have lived long. John told me so himself. I almost hoped that—"

"That he'd die?" interrupted Katherine, maliciously. "Well, to be truthful I have wished it many times. Cousin John would have to think of somebody else then. Perhaps he'd turn his attention to you, mother darling."

"He won't while Paul lives," sighed Mrs. Curtis. "I don't know just what to do. I've thought of every conceivable way to get that girl out of the house, and John forestalls me every time."

"I'm glad Philip hasn't seen her," remarked Katherine. "He's just the religious maudlin kind who would fall for an appealing face like hers." Mrs. Curtis made an impatient gesture, and Katherine proceeded. "We can't deny she is appealing, mamma, even if we hate her! And God knows I loathe her so I could strangle her with these two hands." She held up clenched fingers, then relaxed them and laughed bitterly. "Heavens! What's the use of butting our heads against a stone wall? Give me a cigarette, my dear Sarah. Philip won't be here until night, and I can get rid of the odor before that."

Meanwhile upstairs Tony Devon was fast getting back to her normal self. The blessed assurance she had that she was needed by her sick friend lifted her spirits. She grieved inwardly for her mother, but shuddered when she thought of her father. Now all ties were cut between them. She had no doubt but that both Uriah and Reggie thought she was dead in the lake. She hoped they did! She'd never see either one of them again.

She was sitting shirking deeply when Paul Pendlehaven spoke to her. "Little dear," said he, reaching out his hand toward her, "come over a minute. I want to talk to you!"

Tonnibel went to him instantly, as she always did when he called her. "You will promise me something," he insisted, as his hot hand clasped hers. "Tony, don't go out again like you did yesterday. I shan't be able to stand it if you do!"

Tonnibel's mind flashed to Philip. She felt sure he would go to the corner of the lake every day to meet her, as he had gone to the canal boat.

Yet as she gazed into the inquiring eyes of her friend, she had no heart to deny him his wish.

"I'm selfish, perhaps," the man went on, "but, Tony dear, if you want to go out, there's lots of cars in the garage, and horses in the stable. Won't you promise me?"

Tony thrust the memory of Philip's face from her mind. She put the wish to be in his arms again, to feel his warm lips once more on hers behind her, and tremblingly smiled in acquiescence.

"I promise," she said in a low voice, but a sob prevented her from saying anything more.

CHAPTER X.

The Stoning.

Never before since he had taken up his work of redemption had Philip MacCauley found the hours so long and so difficult to live through. Day after day he canoed to the place Tony had promised to meet him, only to return to Ithaca more at sea than ever. He had the sickening idea that the girl he had grown to love was again in the clutches of her brute of a father and Reginald Brown.

Tony, too, began to lose the high spirits that had returned almost immediately after her escape from the canal boat. The gray eyes grew darkly circled, the lovely mouth seemed to have lost the power to smile.

Paul Pendlehaven noted all this with apprehension. He questioned the girl time after time, asking her if she felt well, if there was anything she wanted, but she always replied in the negative.

One day after they had had their dinner, he sat looking at her curiously. She was close to the window reading a book, when he caused her to look up by calling her name.

"Run downstairs, Tony dear," he went on, "and tell my brother to come up here before office hours. Will you, honey?"

The girl rose, laying aside her book. She dreaded venturing into Mrs. Curtis' presence and shivered when she remembered the critical Katherine who looked her over with supercilious toleration whenever they happened to meet. But she made no complaint and went slowly downstairs.

The dining room door was closed, but the sound of voices from within told her the family was at dinner. She opened the door slowly and stepped inside. For one moment her vision was obscured by the fright that suddenly took possession of her. As the blur cleared from her eyes, she saw John Pendlehaven smiling at her. Then a sharp ejaculation from some one else swung her gaze from the doctor's face, and it settled on—Philip MacCauley.

She went extremely pale and put out her hand to grasp something for support as if she were going to fall. She saw him rise up slowly, an expression of amazement and relief going across his face. She smiled, but what a weary little smile it was and how full of pleading, as if she were silently begging him to forgive her for some deed she'd done.

John Pendlehaven gazed at the two young people, and then he too got to his feet.

"Philip," he said abruptly, "this is Tonnibel Devon. She's Paul's companion. We have—"

Philip interrupted the speaker by his sudden bound around the table. "Tony Devon, little Tony," he cried. "I thought, oh, I thought you were dead. I thought I'd lost you forever."

A noise fell from Katherine's lips, and Mrs. Curtis stumbled to her feet. "So you know her too, Philip," she snarled with a hasty glance at her pallid daughter. "I thought we'd kept her well out of your way. So you've played the sneak while eating bread and butter in my house, miss," she blurted at Tony. "Well, it's what one might have expected of you—you hussy."

"Mother!" gasped Katherine, as Tonnibel snatched her hands from Philip. "Kathie, you needn't 'mother' me!" cried Mrs. Curtis, blind with rage. "Either she goes away or I do. I won't stay in the house with a common sneak—a common—"

"Sarah, sit down," thundered John Pendlehaven. "Don't speak another such word or—"

Tony was at the doctor's side before he could finish his threat.

"I didn't sneak," she said, looking up at him. "Oh, please—please believe me."

"That she didn't," cried Philip, coming to her side. "Cousin John, I've known Tony Devon ages, and I didn't even know she was in this house." He turned his flashing eyes upon Mrs. Curtis, who was weeping hysterically. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself. Cousin Sarah," he went on, "to use such language to a perfectly nice little girl. Why, you've just about broken her heart."

His voice had sunk to a passionate whisper. His eyes misted in a youthful struggle to control his joy, and—and at the sight of him, Katherine lost her wits entirely.

"Who and what have we been harboring in this house, Cousin John?" he shrieked in a high thin voice, struggling to her feet. "A gutter rat, a little snake, a loose girl—"

Each word, brought out with greater vehemence and passion than the one before, struck the listeners dumb. In shame-faced misery, Tonnibel sank to the floor, dropping her head into her hands.

"Oh, no, I'm not that," she wailed. "My money never lived in the gutter; she never did. I was poor, awful poor—"

"Poor!" exclaimed Katherine. "You're worse than poor. I suppose you've wheedled Philip the same way you have Cousin Paul."

"Katherine, I command you to be silent," shouted Pendlehaven. "If you say another word, I shall ask you to leave my house."

"Well, I never!" screamed Mrs. Curtis.

"And you too, Sarah," thrust in the doctor. "We don't know the truth of this thing, but I know very well that Tony Devon is not a bad girl."

"That she is not," interjected Philip. "Now I'll tell you all about it."

As John Pendlehaven raised her to her feet, Tonnibel lifted her head and fixed her tearful eyes on Captain MacCauley.

"You promised you'd never tell anybody," she murmured. Her mind was with the dead Edith Devon, and the words of her own serious reverent oath given in the presence of her wild-eyed mother would not allow her to consent that Philip should lift the stigma heaped upon her by the Curtis women.

"So I did," admitted Philip, soberly, "but you see now this has happened. You must release me from that promise."

"I can't," sighed Tony. Then turned her face to Pendlehaven.

"You'll trust us," she pleaded, waving her hand toward Philip. "Please trust him and me."

"Ha!" shrieked Mrs. Curtis. "Trust you—"

"Shut up, Cousin Sarah," snapped Philip at the angry woman. Then he addressed himself to the doctor. "I did promise her I wouldn't tell how we met. And I won't! In fact it isn't any one's business. Is it, Cousin John?"

"Not that I can see," came in rather drawing answer.

"I'll repeat what I said before," Philip took up hastily. "I didn't know she lived here."

"We're ready to believe that—nit," cried Katherine.

Captain MacCauley stared at her. Was this frowning angry girl the smiling, yielding Katherine he had known or thought he had known?

"You can believe it or not, Kathie," he told her savagely. "It makes no difference to me. But it's true, just the same."

"Wait here for me, Philip," said the doctor, in a low tone. "I'll be back in a moment."

Then he took Tony by the hand and they went out together.

For several tense moments a silence too dreadful to describe settled down upon the dining room. Katherine twisted her fork sulkily and Mrs. Curtis still sniffed in her handkerchief.

Philip looked from one to the other, wishing with all his heart he could say something that would clear the atmosphere.

"I'm sorry, Cousin Sarah," he said abruptly, trying to smile. "It certainly was awkward, wasn't it?"

"Awkward?" repeated Mrs. Curtis, wrinkling her face. "Awkward isn't the word, Philip. It was disgusting."

The gorge rose again in his throat. "Tonnibel Devon is the best girl I know," he asserted. "Poor little thing. I pity her with all my heart."

"Pity is akin to love, my dear Philip," sneered Mrs. Curtis.

"Mother," cried Katherine. "Philip wouldn't so far forget himself and his friends and position as to love—well—if you can't keep your tongue still, go upstairs."

This was a shock for Philip. That any girl could speak to her own mother in such a way was beyond his comprehension. The door opened just then and Dr. John walked in.

"She came down to tell me that Paul wanted me and forgot it," he said in a low tone. "The poor child is quite overcome."

Mrs. Curtis tossed her head and rose from the table, and Katherine, rising also, followed her mother out of the room.

There was very little said between the young man and his older friend after the ladies had taken their departure, but when Captain MacCauley was ready to leave, he looked anxiously at his companion.

"Cousin John," he murmured. "You won't let any one—"

"Indeed not," interrupted the doctor, anticipating the lad's plea. "Tony Devon is here to stay, Phil."

"Could I—could I see her, Cousin

John, just a minute?" the boy faltered.

"Not tonight, old fellow," replied the doctor, kindly. "Tomorrow, perhaps."

And Philip had to be content.

That evening Katherine spent with her mother in hopeless misery. "He acted just as if he loved her," she wailed at one time in their conversation. "I'd give anything to find out how long he's known her."

"So would I," said Mrs. Curtis. "Katherine, we've got to get her away by some means. She's bewitched John—she's brought Paul up from his grave—and there's no telling, she may usurp your place in their will."

"And now she's hoodwinked Philip," gulped Katherine. "Can't you think of some plan? Can't we claim she steals or something like that?"

"John wouldn't believe it, especially now that Reggie is coming home," was the answer. "His letter today said he'd be here very soon. Everything that happens in this house out of the ordinary is blamed on my poor boy."

And she began again to cry.

"Great Heavens, mother, don't do that," screamed Katherine. "Can't you see weeping doesn't do any good? You make me so nervous I could fly. We've got to make some plan to get her out of here. While you're sniveling all the time, you can't think."

Mrs. Curtis rose and walked to her bedroom door.

"My children have no sympathy for me at all," she shot back. "But you say I can't think while I cry? Well, watch me! I'll bet you five dollars Tony Devon is out of this house before another week is over."

The next morning when Reggie Brown came home, he went directly to his mother. Of course, as usual, she wept at the sight of him and began to upbraid him for his thoughtlessness. Why hadn't he let her know where he was? Why had he been gone so long?

Reggie laughed insolently. "Do I ever let you know where I go, mother?" he demanded, dropping into an easy chair. "No, I don't, and I won't! I've come for five hundred dollars I have to have. Now cough it up."

"I haven't that much money in the world," sobbed Mrs. Curtis.

"Then wheedle it out of Cousin John," he commanded. "I've simply got to have it!"

Paying no heed to his gruff command, Mrs. Curtis rocked to and fro in excess of agony.

"If Paul had died," she wept, "we'd have had a lot of money—"

"How do you know?" was Reggie's quick query.

"Because I know how his will's made," explained his mother. "and unless his Caroline is found, your Cousin John and I get all his money."

Reginald's eyes blazed into a flame of interest. Money was the only thing that attracted him.

"Why doesn't he die, then?" he asked, dropping back sullenly. "He's old enough and sick enough, isn't he?"

"Because he's getting well," replied his mother. "That girl—"

"What girl?" Reggie's voice asked the question in monotone.

"Some hussy John picked up not long ago," was the reply. "She's brought Paul to life, and John is wild about her, and now—"

"Where's she?" interjected Reginald. "With your Cousin Paul. And, Reggie, I'd give five hundred to get her out of the house."

The boy rose and stood gazing down at the tips of his highly polished boots.

"I'd give more than that," he replied solemnly. "to know Cousin Paul was in his grave."

"Then rid us of the girl, and he'll soon keel over," said the mother.

But Reginald wasn't interested in Cousin Paul's new companion. He wanted money and that was all, now that Tony Devon was dead.

"How about the five hundred for me?" he questioned, looking at her keenly.

"I've said I hadn't it, my son," said she. "Now run away and don't bother me any more."

Reggie did leave the room, but not the house. His mind was filled with many plans to get hold of the cash he needed. There were two things had to be done. Whoever the girl with Cousin Paul was, she had to go. It was enough that his mother didn't want her in the house. Reggie could abuse his own women folks; he could make them cry all he wanted to, but that any one, and a stranger too, could force his mother into a spell of hysterics, he wouldn't tolerate.

Then the other thing to which he had made up his mind almost brought his hair on end when he contemplated it. The world had to be relieved of Cousin Paul.

A little drop of something—Reggie rose to his feet and walked nervously up and down the room. "I would be easy enough to get hold of, for Dr. John always had plenty of drugs on hand."

That afternoon he met Captain MacCauley on State street. The sight of Reggie's slim swaggering figure brought Philip to a quick decision. He stopped directly in front of Brown, and as it was the first time they'd met since the memorable moment when Reggie had been flung in the lake, they looked embarrassedly into each other's eyes.

"So you decided to come home?" asked Philip, his voice sharply toned. Reggie gathered together his courage and curled his lips. Why should he be afraid of a Salvation army captain even if he were rich?

"It looks like it, doesn't it?" he sneered. "And it's none of your business, anyway."

"It's my business about how you treat Tony Devon," Philip began, but Reggie's fresh outburst cut off his words.

"Nobody'll ever treat her any way after this," he almost growled. "She's dead, drowned in the lake."

A horrified expression passed over Philip's face. Then he realized that Reginald didn't know of Tony Devon's presence in the Pendlehaven home.

"She's better off then than she was the last time you saw her," he said and whirled away.

Twenty minutes later Philip was talking to John Pendlehaven.

"You promised last night I could see her today," he pleaded. "I'll promise only to stay a few minutes. May I go up?"

"No; I'll call Tony down," was the reply. "I don't want Paul disturbed today."

When the boy and girl stood facing each other, embarrassment kept them silent for some moments. Philip had decided to find out whether Tony knew of Reginald Brown's connection with the Pendlehavens, although he was positive in his own mind she did not.

"It's a nice day," he blurted out, and Tonnibel's low "yes" was her only answer. How pretty she looked, thought Philip, and how much he desired to kiss her as he had the other time in the breaking dawn on the shore of Lake Cayuga.

"Tony," he said huskily, "don't you—don't you—like me at all?"

Tonnibel opened her eyes to their fullest extent. Why, hadn't she kissed him? "Yes," she said, "I have."

"Tony, Don't You Like Me at All?"

Sloan's Liniment should be kept handy for aches and pains

WHY wait for a severe pain, an ache, a rheumatic twinge following exposure, a sore muscle, sciatica, or lumbago to make you quit work, when you should have Sloan's Liniment handy to help curb it and keep you active, and fit, and on the job?

Without rubbing, for it penetrates, apply a bit today to the afflicted part.
Notice the gratifying, clean, prompt relief that follows. Sloan's Liniment couldn't keep its many thousands of friends the world over if it didn't make good.
That's worth remembering. All drugs-gists—three sizes—the largest is the most economical. 35c, 70c, $1.40.

RETAILS 700 BOTTLES OF TANLAC IN ONE DAY

Atlantic, Ga.

Tanlac Co., Atlanta, Ga.:
We are now selling Tanlac at the rate of considerably over 2,000 bottles per week. One Saturday alone we sold through our eleven Atlanta stores approximately 700 bottles at retail, direct to consumers.
On referring to our records, we find that our sales since its introduction here, have reached the astonishing total of 80,000 bottles.

This record is far in excess of any we have ever made before in the distribution of any one preparation, in fact, we have never handled anything that ever approaches it as a seller.

Thousands of our best people are now using the preparation with the most gratifying results, and we can only account for the phenomenal demand we are having by the fact that it is a medicine of extraordinary merit.

Tanlac Co., Atlanta, Ga.:
The writer has been in the drug business in this city for the past forty years, serving as clerk in two of the best stores in town, before engaging in business on his own account. Has handled all kinds of preparations exploited as tonics and system builders; has seen scores of them come and go, but never in my career as a druggist has the undersigned seen the equal of Tanlac. It has done wonders for our people here. The best of folks in all walks of life buy and use it and the nice things which are said regarding the merit of it is certainly most gratifying to all connected with this place of business. It is indeed a source of satisfaction to assure the customer it will do the work and then have them come back and cheerfully verify the statement. This remedy is one of the few preparations behind which we have put our selling energy, because we are thoroughly convinced of its true merit. Since I have had the agency for Tanlac I have sold sixty-eight bottles.

Prominent Dealers All Over America Tell of Unprecedented Success of Tanlac

The following are extracts from letters and telegrams from promi-

States and Canada telling in plain cold figures of the remarkable growth and development of Tanlac through America:

Portland, Me.

Tanlac Co., Atlantic, Ga.:
The Tanlac sales have been remarkable * * * To date we have sold over five thousand bottles. The people of Portland who have used Tanlac speak very highly of its medicinal value and we have never received one word of complaint, but, on the Per Jos. Sylvester, Mgr.

Westbrook, Me.

Tanlac Co., Atlanta, Ga.:
My sales of Tanlac have been larger than the sales of all remedies put together. I have found your agency for Tanlac a source of pleasure because I have yet to find one single person that has not been benefitted by taking this famous compound. I have one testimonial that I think is wonderful and that is of a woman that had for years a serious stomach trouble. After taking one bottle her stomach trouble disappeared and I can assure you she is a very much pleased woman. Day after day I hear most wonderful things for Tanlac. I appreciate the fact that it is my privilege to be the Tanlac agent for Westbrook, because this famous remedy is doing such splendid things and giving complete satisfaction to those that take it.

CHAS. A. VALLEE,
The Rexall Store.

Memphis, Tenn.

Tanlac Co., Atlanta, Ga.:
Since taking on the agency, we have purchased in the aggregate 410,442 bottles of Tanlac. The continued enthusiastic sale of Tanlac over such a period is phenomenal, especially when you consider that for the first eight months in 1919 we purchased 164,600 bottles.

Kansas City, Mo.

Tanlac Co., Atlanta, Ga.:
Our record shows that we have sold at retail in Kansas City in a little over a year 39,932 bottles of Tanlac, which we consider a splendid record.

The preparation gives universal satisfaction and hundreds of our customers have publicly endorsed it.
To date, we have not received one complaint but on the other hand, many words of praise for Tanlac.
OWL DRUG COMPANY,

than we have during any similar period in the past.

FOOD VALUE OF CORN SILAGE

Crop Is More Easily Harvested and Put Into Silo Than Rye, Cowpeas or Alfalfa.

Almost any green crop can be made into silage successfully. Much care, however, must be taken to expel the air from such hollow-stemmed plants as the small cereal grains by cutting fine and packing firmly. Other crops, of which legumes are examples, are deficient in the fermentable constituents needed for palatable silage. On the other hand, a few crops, such as the saccharine sorghums, have so much sugar that unless cut at a more mature stage they have a tendency to produce sour silage.

In most parts of the United States more food material can be obtained from an acre of corn as silage than from an acre of any other crop that can be grown. Corn is more easily harvested and put into the silo than

None of Corn Crop Is Wasted in Filling a Silo.

crops like rye, clover, cowpeas, or alfalfa, and when cut for silage the maximum quantity of nutrients is preserved. Experiments have shown that corn, when silaged, lost 15.6 per cent of the dry matter, against 23.8 per cent when cut for fodder and cured in the field. Moreover, there is less waste in feeding silage than in feeding fodder, since good silage properly fed is all consumed. When corn is cut for silage the land is cleared and left ready for another crop sooner than when the corn is shocked or is husked from the standing stalk. Corn can be put into the silo at a cost not above that of shocking, husking, grinding and shredding.

ing and Feeding of Silage may be

SCRUB SIRE NOT ECONOMICAL

Common and Inferior Cattle Never Bring As Much Money on Market as Better Grades.

The only reason that the average person can give for using a scrub sire in any line of live stock breeding is that they think they are making money by using a cheap animal. They do not figure into the future and see that it is the offspring of this animal which will either make or lose them money.
The corn breeder does not think of selecting the rubbings with which to plant his corn field. Neither can the live stock man afford to select a sire which will not produce a better and more uniform class of stuff. A glance into the live stock market will convince one that the purebred sire with the proper individual merit will be a paying investment. When common and inferior steers are selling for nine cents, a better grade of steers in the same kind of flesh are usually selling for from 10 to 11 cents. In addition to this, the better cattle usually will put on gains more economically.

CHANGE PASTURE FOR SHEEP

For Best Results It Is Imperative
That Animals Have Grass Not Too Closely Bitten.

For best results it is imperative that sheep have frequent changes of pasture, that a "fresh bite" be had,
that grass may not be too closely bitten, that worms therefore will be less likely to infest them and that they may have a surer supply of mineral matter as well as organic matter in their feed. Lambs especially must have new seeding each spring. On the sheep-raised and contaminated pastures they infest themselves with worms. On new grass they escape worms and besides that, find such grass more palatable and easily masticated and digested.

RISE IN PRICES FOR HORSES

Indication of Growing Needs for Farming and Transportation—Outlook Is Good.

The rise in prices for good draft horses and mules in spite of the existence of more than twenty-one million horses and almost five million mules on farms, indicates how farming and transportation needs are growing. Good authorities predict a steady rise in prices of horses and mules for the next three years.

PENNSYLVANIA APPLE MOVEMENT BREAKS ALL RECORDS.

A review of the commercial apple movement for the year 1920, made by the Bureau of Markets, Pennsylvania, Department of Agriculture shows a decided increase over that of 1919. Taken by months the comparison is interesting, the following table showing the movement in carload lots:

	1920	1919
July	23	2
Aug.	13	14
Sept.	146	170
Oct.	976	699
Nov.	442	121
Dec.	200	77

It is shown that 717 more carloads of Pennsylvania fruit were moved in 1920 than 1919.

Weather conditions and the unprecedented size of the crop had much to do with the record movement. With a crop of only about seven and one half million bushels in 1919 and with the early advent of cold weather, the shipments fell off.

Open weather in 1920, enabling farmers to hold apples in farm storages throughout the fall and early winter, together with a crop of over twenty million bushels, has drawn out the shipments up to the very end of the year.

The unexpected size of the crop this past season brought with it an abundance of anxiety to the farmers.

Many growers could not get the necessary help to handle all their crop commercially. Packages were high.

Barrels cost from $1.25 to $1.50 each delivered to the grower. Several states put on publicity campaigns to stimulate the buying of apples by the public. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture urged in its campaign the cost of handling and evidence of the good results of this work came to the Department from the apple districts. One shipper moved between 30 and 40 cars as a result of the public campaign.

Exit Humorist.

While making a tour of the southern states, we were driving along a country road, when a farmer came walking toward us. One of our crowd, a humorist, thinking he would have some fun with the man, stopped the car, and taking a small satchel and a magazine, gave a ten minute impression of Billy Sunday. When he had finished, the man looked at him a little queerly, put his hand in his pocket and gave him a card. On it were the words: "I am deaf."—Exchange.

FARM ANIMALS

EXTRA FEED FATTENS CATTLE

Cottonseed Cake as Supplement to Summer Pasture Increases Materially Rate of Gains.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Feeding cottonseed cake to steers as a supplement to summer pasture increases materially the rate of gains made by the animals, causes them to finish more quickly and take on a higher degree of finish, and increases the margin between the buying and selling prices, specialists of the United States department of agriculture say in Bulletin 777, just published by the department. The bulletin is a report of experiments in fattening steers on summer pasture conducted co-operatively by the department and the Alabama experiment station in 1912 and 1913, and the Mississippi experiment station in 1915 and 1916.

All the experiments were carried out under actual and typical farm conditions. Consequently the results may be applied directly in many regions to the management and feeding of cattle on pasture. In each experiment, groups of steers were kept on pasture alone; on pasture with a supplementary feed of one-half corn chop and one-half cottonseed cake; and on pasture with a supplementary feed of cottonseed cake. The average daily gains for each animal, which may be considered the most valuable standard in judging the efficiency of rations, were 1.49 pounds for the steers getting pasture only; 1.83 pounds for the steers getting cottonseed cake with pasture; and 1.33 pounds for those on pasture supplemented by the mixture of cake and corn chop.

The initial cost of the steers per 100 pounds of the three groups was the same for any one year, but in each case the steers on pasture alone sold for a lower price. The margins between the buying and selling prices of the cattle were always in favor of those which were fed supplements with their pastures. The margins averaged less than 25 cents a hundred pounds for the steers on pasture alone, compared to 90 cents for animals which were fed cottonseed cake with pasture, and 81½ cents for the animals whose pasture was supplemented with the mixture of cake and corn chop. After the animals had been butchered inspection showed that the steers which were fed cottonseed cake or a mixture of cake and corn with pasture dressed out heavier than the cattle which had pasture alone.

While the steers that had pasture alone made gains cheaply, the total gains were not large and the steers did not take on a high finish. Their unfinished condition is reflected in the small margin on which they were sold and low dressing percentages. Thus the profits they returned were smaller than for the steers in the other two groups.

The cost of gains of steers on pasture is greatly increased by feeding cottonseed cake, it was found, but the better market price received for caked cattle usually pays for the additional cost of feeding cake, and returns a greater average profit than is realized on the grass-fed cattle. One of the distinct advantages of supplementing pastures for concentrates is the fact that steers so handled can be finished more quickly and can be marketed earlier than steers getting grass alone. Thus the cattle can be sold before the rush of cased cattle glut the market and depresses prices. Moreover, when cattle are marketed early the pastures have time to regenerate and furnish good grazing for other stock during the fall.

There is only one case, says the bulletin, where pasture alone is preferable to pastures with concentrates. Steers of inferior quality may return more profit by grazing alone than by grazing with the addition of supplementary feeds, especially when they are on good pastures that are cheap. Scrub steers do not respond readily to the use of good feeds, and even when well finished do not command satisfactory prices in competition with well-bred cattle similarly finished. The better the quality of the steers, the safer it is to give them high-priced feeds.

Sheep Need Much Water.
An impression prevails that sheep can get along without water for long periods, but this is wrong. The sheep is no relation to a camel. They should have access to plenty of fresh, clean water.

No one shall take them from me—

I love my pipe and good old Velvet—

My comforters in adversity, my wise counselors when problems vex.

Companions of my loneliness and sharers of my happy hours.

Their friendliness has made me feel more kindly toward my fellow men.

They have made this old world a better place to live in.

I love my pipe and good old Velvet; no one shall take them from me.

Chinese Music Unwritten.
Chinese music is not written. The words of some of the famous songs have been preserved, but the music has been handed down from father to son for generations that go far back before the day of the troubadours. When music is played it is played according to the memory of the musician and his ideas of interpretation. A musician varies the performance as his best judgement dictates, and the strings, reeds or brass may break in at almost any time.

Effect Not Appreciated.
Instead of candles, Lucille's mother placed six large marshmallows on top of her birthday cake. When little Doris returned from the party her mother said: "Well, did you all have a jolly good time?" and she replied: "Yes, all but the cake. Oh, mother, that cake looked so bad, just like a cemetery. It had little tombstones on it."

Hadn't Thought of That.
A man, unable to choose a wife from three girls whom he admired, sent duplicate letters of proposal to all, intending to marry the one who assented first. The trouble that he did not foresee was that the two too-late ones would sue for breach of promise.

First Dolls.
The first dolls of which there is any knowledge were found among the treasures unearthed from the ruins of Babylon. They were small figures in terra cotta and ivory, beautifully carved and must have been fascinating playthings for little Assyrian children. The little girls of Syria had mechanical dolls. The dolls the classic children played with were made of wax and clay, decorated with bright colors. As these children married very young, they played with their dolls until just before their wedding day.

Artesian Wells.
The Chinese have obtained water through means of artesian wells for over 1,000 years. One of the most famous wells in existence is that at Grenelle, in the outskirts of Paris, where the water is brought from a depth of 179 feet. It yields 516½ gallons of water a minute. Many years ago a well in Petsh was sunk to the depth of 3,160 feet.

Eliminated.
Marie and Helen were playing house one day, when Ruth joined them. They were not particularly anxious to see her that day, and finally said, "Well, you can be the maid and this is your day out."—Nebraska Awgwan.

Interesting Old Bible.
One of the original owners of the Treacle Bible, living in the eighteenth century, had made notations on the fly leaf concerning "John, who was born on Friday the 10th of February, 1769, at a quarter after eight at night, was baptized at Crossgate church on March 16 following, by the Reverend Mr. Wheeler, who died of smallpox, 12th April, 1769, and was buried the next day at Crossgate church, aged eight weeks and five days." Other deaths, marriages and births were dated as far back as 1701-1702.

Progressing Rapidly.
For the fourth time a new baby had arrived at the home of Robert's sister Nellie. When informed of the event one of his aunts told him in an impressive manner that he was now an uncle for the fourth time. Rather fussed, the little fellow answered: "Goodness me, if things keep on I'll soon be a grandpa."

Novelty Soon Wears Off.
An experienced young woman told us the other day that there is a time in every engaged girl's life when about a day's growth of beard adds to her thrill, but that after the novelty wears off clean shaving is much preferred.—Ohio State Journal.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(Cop. right, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR JANUARY 11

PETER AND JOHN HEAL A LAME MAN.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 3.
GOLDEN TEXT—Freely ye have received, freely give.—Matt. 10:8
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Matt. 10:7, 8; Mark 1:29-34, Luke 4:40, John 14:2; 1 Peter 4:11.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Lame Man Made Whole.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter and John at the Beautiful Gate.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Faith and a Helping Hand.

The indications are that some months had elapsed since Pentecost. The believers were being taught by the apostles, who were showing their credentials by their mighty works (2:43).
1. The Lame Man Healed (vv. 1-11).
1. The occasion (v. 1). Peter and John were going to the house of worship. They were going up to Jerusalem to worship though they knew full well the corruptions of Judaism. What is needed today is not separation from denominational bodies so much as for those who know the Lord and the higher things of the Christian life to help lead those who lack these things into the better way.

2. The place (v. 2). It was at the beautiful gate which led from the outer to the inner court of the temple. This man was placed at the entrance of the place of worship, because where man comes closest to God he also comes closest to his fellow man. Human instinct is quick to discern this. Beggars are seldom found at doors of theaters and unfilled lecture halls.

3. The man (vv. 2, 5). This beggar was infirm from his birth.

4. The method (vv. 4-8). (1) Gained the man's attention (v. 4). Peter and John commanded him to look on them. Having secured his attention they gave him more than he asked or expected. He asked for money and got healing. (2) Peter commanded him in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth to rise up and walk (v. 6). This was the very thing he had been unable to do for so many years. Was not this mocking his very impotency? No! No! It was in the name of Jesus. With the commandment went the ability to do. (3) Peter took him by the right hand (v. 7). This act was meant to give impetus to his faith, not strength to his ankles. (4) The man's response (v. 8). Strength came to his feet and ankle bones at once. He stood, he walked, he leaped and shouted praise to God. He thoroughly advertised the miracle. He ascribed the honor to God for his healing and walked into the house of God. The one who has experienced the life of Christ will surely make it manifest.

5. The effect (vv. 9-11). The people were filled with wonder and amazement. The multitude ran together to see this wonderful thing. There was no question as to the genuineness of the miracle, for this man was a familiar figure for many years. This miracle may be regarded as a parable setting forth the work of the church in the world. (1.) The helpless beggar had to be carried to the temple gate. Men and women out of Christ are spiritually helpless; they need to be brought where the life of God can be applied to them. We should bring sinners to Christ. (2.) Taking him by the hand shows the manner of the Christian's help.

11. Peter Witnessing of Jesus Christ Before the Multitude (vv. 12-26).

This miracle focused the attention of the people upon Peter and John. Peter immediately turned their attention from himself to Christ. This is most unlike the claimants to divine power today. Disclaiming power of his own he seized the opportunity to preach Christ to the people who had assembled. He told them it was faith in Jesus Christ, whom the God of their fathers had glorified, whom they had deliberately delivered up and denied before Pilate when he desired to set him free, and that they desired a murderer to be granted freedom instead. He showed that the disciples were also witnesses that God had raised Jesus from the dead, and charged home upon them their awful guilt; for they had denied the holy one and the just, and chosen Barabbas, a murderer, instead of Christ, and killed the Prince of Life. He appealed to them to repent (v. 19), telling them that they had committed this awful crime in ignorance, God would pardon their sin if they would repent. He assured them that Israel would yet enjoy refreshing seasons from the Lord, when God should send Jesus Christ back to earth to consummate the work of redemption. He appealed to the Scriptures as the basis of his warnings and promises (vv. 22-26).

Service of Life.
Life should be measured by usefulness, as it is to serve the world that we are entitled to live in it. And after all service, well and faithfully performed brings the only real happiness, all the upward pomp and insignificance of rank are but badges of service. "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister" not to be served but to serve is the imperative of the highest authority in spiritual matters. It was a most arresting object lesson that Jesus gave his disciples when he washed their feet.

"A Soul Above Potatoes"

By PAUL HAMILTON

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"You'll stay in Clifton, won't you, Harney?"

Mrs. Ross looked all motherly anxiety as she addressed her son. With them on the garden seat was Harney's sweetheart, Alma Reeves, whose bright, pretty face reflected the solicitude of the older woman.

The son and lover affected quite a lordly air. A week previous his uncle, Mark Leaton, dying, had bequeathed him a neat sum in money and a grocery store he owned in the village.

"Tell you," pronounced the young man, almost grandly, "I've got a soul above potatoes."

"But, Harney, dear," intervened Alma, "you know how pleased you were at first with the idea of being your own master and running a business for yourself."

"That's all right," acknowledged this ambitious favorite of fortune, "but I've met my old chum since then. You know Ned Dallas came down to see me when he learned of my big luck. Well, he's a clerk in a broker's office and he says that with his experience of the money market, if I will supply the capital, he will go into partnership with me and will make a regular Napoleon of finance of me."

Before leaving Harney made an arrangement with Warren Doane, an old clerk in a local store, to place him in charge of the one he had inherited on a basis of equal division of profits. The day after Harney's departure Mr. Doane called at the Ross home.

"I am going to surprise Harney," he told Mrs. Ross, who was an old friend. "He has agreed to let me have full swing with advertising and specialty wrinkles and I am going to build up a grand trade. Alma, I shall need some one to take charge of the cashier's desk. Can I count on you?" and Alma acquiesced in the arrangement and the enterprise started out under most promising auspices.

The young adventurer across the shoals of finance wrote almost daily the first month of his absence. He was all anticipation, ambition, enthusiasm. Then he became less effusive in his epistles and during the second month of his absence only two brief letters reached home.

"We must not expect too much attention from the poor boy, immersed as he is in business cares," Mrs. Ross told Alma, who, in her faith and innocence, pictured "the poor boy" handling the monetary destinies of nations. The merest "All well—love to all," about comprised the substance of subsequent letters from Harney. Meanwhile, Alma and Mr. Doane begrudged no thought or care that would tend to place the despised grocery business upon a firm and growing basis and keep it there. The idea that she was doing something that benefited the business interests of her lover kept Alma animated and glad. How she worked, and planned, and hoped! She had, however, received an inkling from something she overheard between two local business men that Harney "was cutting a wide swath in the city," making daring speculative investments and going beyond his depth.

It was one Saturday night and Mr. Doane had closed the store an hour earlier than usual on account of a rain storm, and Alma had decided to remain for an hour or so and balance the books and was engrossed at her task when the knob of the store door rattled, and then there was a quick, sharp tapping on its glass panel. Alma could make out the visitor against the glare of the lamp. It was Harney Ross and she uttered a cry of joy as, unlocking the door, she led him into shelter and clung to his arm, uttering fervent words of welcome. Then as he came within the radius of the desk lamp her heart smote her.

"I've tramped it from the trolley, Alma," he said. "I ran out of money and I'm about famished. You've got a neat and inviting layout here," and he went over to a counter which held a tempting array of cheeses, dried beef, boiled ham and some pickle relishes, on the way drawing a liberal handful from the cracker box, and set about eating with an enjoyment that both gratified and saddened Alma, for this returning lover of hers dreadfully suggested the penitent prodigal.

"This is sure a land of plenty," said Harney, with a sigh of satisfaction as he completed a lunch sufficient for two men. "Alma, I've come back with nothing but a hard, costly lesson learned. Those city sharks took my money away from me so easy, I wonder how they did it. I'm through as a financial Napoleon. I'm glad to creep home, humble and glad to come back to the store, and mother—and you."

"And, oh! Harney," jubilated Alma, "such a business the store has done! You poor boy, indeed! How welcome you are!"

"I had a soul above potatoes, you know?" observed Harney with mournful retrospection. "Well, if the flat upstairs is still vacant—"

"Yes, it is, Harney," nodded Alma.

"Then it's a quiet wedding as soon as you can get ready. And, after what I've gone through, it will be paradise to settle down in the cozy, modest little home."

"Even if it is right over the potatoes!" laughed Alma, bestowing a kiss that to Harney Ross was more precious than all the money he had lost.

FEDERAL PROTECTION FOR COAL USERS.

The Government will not permit coal consumers to be made victims of the controversy between operators and dealers relative to retroactive increases. Increases of from 35 to 50 cents a ton beginning November 1, have been demanded of dealers by the operators. It was said that fully 90 per cent of the contracts for coal carry a clause stating specifically that if a strike is called a retroactive increase might be asked.

Dealers declare that operators and wholesalers are acting in disregard of Government orders.

DANIELS ORDERS REVISION OF NAVY AWARDS.

Secretary Daniels has called a meeting of the Naval Board of Awards for January 5 to reconsider the whole subject of decorations for heroic service. The reconvening of the board is one of the developments in the controversy caused by the recent refusal of Admiral Sims, commander of the American naval forces in European waters to receive the award of a Distinguished Service Cross on the ground that injustice had been worked to many men under his command in the manner in which Secretary Daniels has changed recommendations made by the award board.

GOOD OLD SANTA CLAUS.

The old Saint was specially kind to us this season. He furnished a chicken to roast, a chicken to stew and a chicken for pot-pie; beside some money and butter and pudding, sausage etc. for days to come. But the climax was reached last Sunday in Cumberland Valley church, where he treated the Sunday School. Beside a fine treat he handed me an envelope. I supposed of course there was some money in it. But imagine our astonishment when, at the supper table, he opened it and a Twenty, a Ten, three one dollar bills and some silver stared us in the face. Mrs. Miller's eyes looked like two Full Moons as she gasped: "That isn't ALL Christmas present, is it?"

At the same time, THANK all these kind people, the Lord alone can and will repay their kindness to us.

How Competition Helps You

The competition that exists among the hundreds of meat distributors, large and small, means

Rivalry in Prices
Rivalry in Service
Rivalry in Economy
Rivalry in Quality

Swift & Company sells meat at the lowest possible price, consistent with quality and service. Our profit of only a fraction of a cent a pound on all products is evidence of keen competition.

Swift & Company must provide the best service to your dealer or he will buy from our competitors. This means a supply of fine fresh meat always on hand for you at your dealer's.

Swift & Company must keep down manufacturing and selling costs, and use all by-products to avoid waste, or else lose money meeting the prices of competitors who do.

Swift & Company must make its products of the highest quality, or see you turn to others. This means better meat for you and a greater variety of appetizing, wholesome food.

We are as glad for this competition as you should be. It helps to keep us on our mettle.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

DON'T DEPEND ON SPRING DELIVERIES

Spring deliveries of Ford cars have never been certain, and they should not be depended upon. Demand has always been greater for Ford cars than the supply or production. So, if you would be sure of having a Ford car, buy it now while deliveries are possible. Don't wait—even next month is an uncertainty.

Only a limited, specified number of cars has been allotted to this territory. That allotment cannot be increased, because the demand all over the country is greater than the supply or production. Get your order in now and you will be one of those who is sure of a Ford car out of our allotment.

It's first come — first served. All orders are filled in rotation. So, if you would be forehanded, if you would be certain of having a Ford car when you want it—then you will buy a Ford car now. A signed order with us is your protection. It is the result of the wisdom of looking ahead.

If you buy a Ford car now, don't think you have to "store" it. The Ford is a car made to serve its owner for business or pleasure throughout the entire year. Ford owners have long since come to recognize the fact. It is no longer popular to "lay-up" your car for the winter. Buy a Ford car now, and use it now.

NO, not a suit of clothes, nor a pair of shoes, but ADVICE. You trust the advice of your banker and make your investments accordingly. You trust the advice of your doctor and preserve your health. Why not benefit by the advice your merchant can give? We wish it were not so, but our wishes will not alter the fact that all clothing will be higher next spring & fall than it is now. This is not trying to alarm any one nor is it guessing. We know, for we know that we paid many dollars more for each suit of clothes we will sell next Spring than we paid for similar suits this Fall. Our ADVICE therefore would be to buy NOW any clothing-- suits, overcoats, shoes that may be needed within the next year. We would advise this even if there were no reduction in price, but our advice ought to be worth more to you when we call attention to the reductions we have made in the price of our Fall and Winter goods. We do this only because we MUST have the room for Spring goods already bought. The savings are as follows:

Slang Among the Ancients.

An ancient use of a modern slang idiom was mentioned recently by T. E. Peet, the lecturer in Egyptology at Manchester university. He said that the Egyptians always used the verb "to do" in referring to a visit to a country, just as an American today speaks of "doing" Paris or London. After this it will not surprise us to learn that Hannibal considered his expeditions as nothing more than "stunts" or that the Roman populace was rather annoyed when Julius Caesar was "done in."—Manchester Guardian.

The Works of Peace.

There remains to us a great duty of defense and preservation; and there is open to us also a noble pursuit, to which the spirit of the times strongly invites us. Let us advance the arts of peace and the works of peace. Let us develop the resources of our land, call forth its powers, build up its institutions, promote all its great interests, and see whether we, also, in our day and generation, may not perform something worthy to be remembered.—Daniel Webster.

Increase of English.

In the year 1600 there were about six million persons who spoke English—a much smaller number than spoke French or Spanish. Today English-speaking people number about one hundred and twenty millions, or about double the aggregate of those who speak French, Italian or Spanish and half as many again as speak German or Russian.

Need Brains First of All.

"In our complex civilization and scarcely knows what ethical principles to follow," says a writer. One might set forth reasonably confident in the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Knew All About It.

Caller—"Doctor, have you ever treated a patient for loss of memory?" Doctor—"Oh, yes, indeed. I have treated many of them lately."

Washing Custom.

The custom of throwing an old shoe after a bride is quite misapprehended when it is done by her companions or lack. According to the superstition of the country, which is of very ancient origin, it should be done by the parent or guardian of the bride, indicating a renunciation of all worldly ownership.

Rubber Early to Cultivate.

Attention is called to the fact that the rubber tree is a native of the tropics and is not adapted to the climate of this country. It is not a tree which may be cultivated in this country.

Swift Locomotion.

Men can run about 32 feet a second, that being the world's record for a hundred yard sprint. Contrary to common supposition, skaters are no swifter than runners, the world's records for both being precisely the same—92.5 seconds for a hundred yards. Runners on skis have, however, made as much as 72 feet a second, and in leaping on skis more than 100 feet a second.

Condition to Avoid.

The dangerous moment in life comes when men begin to over-value the past at the expense of the present. It is the moment of religious controversy, for ancestor worship, for narrowing in, for exalting one set of people and excluding another. When we reach it, it means that we are growing old. But we need never reach it.—Evelyn.

Few Things Really Count.

A man can pile up a palace of marble and live the life of a proper within it, or he may be able to build only a hovel and yet live a princely life within its poor walls. The things that can really help or hinder a human soul are, after all, comparatively few.

Cattallo an Hybrid.

The cattallo is an animal one parent of which is the buffalo and the other the cow. The hybrids have been raised in considerable numbers on a cattle ranch in the Panhandle of Texas.
